

Parent Training: Understanding Interagency Collaboration

Building a Support Network for Students

Presented by: Dr. Laurel Keegan, Special Education Director,
Southern Fulton School District

What is Interagency Collaboration?

- Interagency collaboration involves partnerships between schools, families, and community agencies.
 - The goal is to coordinate services to support students in transitioning to adulthood.
-

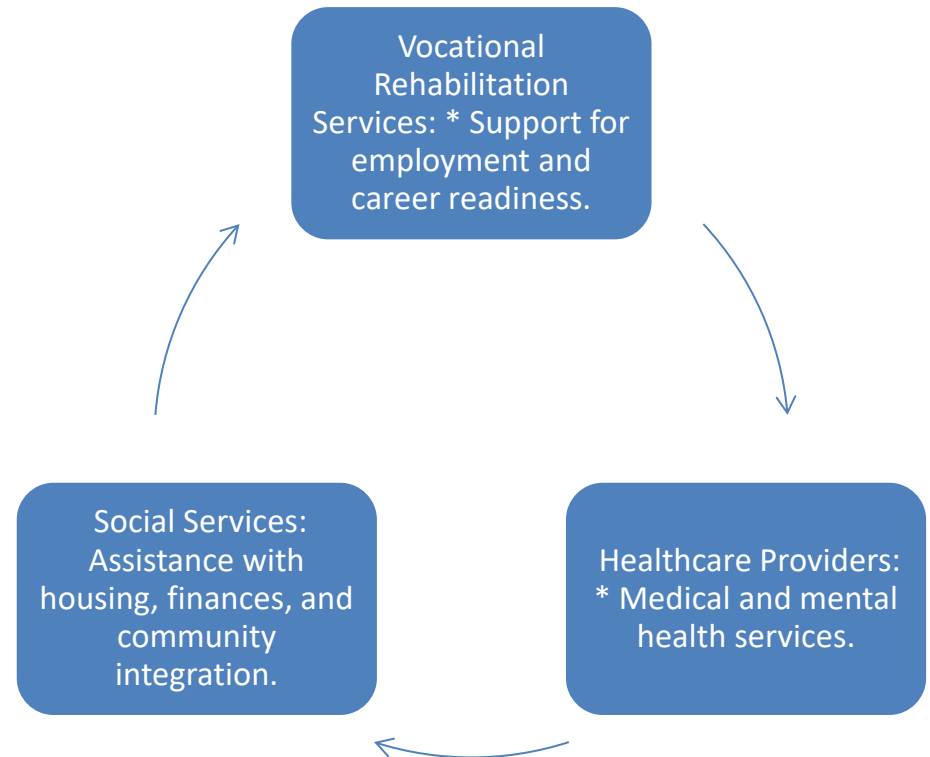

Importance of Interagency Collaboration

- Ensures students have access to comprehensive services (e.g., employment, health, independent living).

- Promotes a smoother transition from school to post-school life.

- Involves various agencies like vocational rehabilitation, healthcare, and social services.

Agencies Involved in Supporting Students

The Role of the School

- The school plays a central role in coordinating services.
- Schools work closely with agencies to ensure the student's needs are met.
- Transition planning in the IEP connects students to necessary resources.

The Role of Parents

- Parents are key advocates for their child.
- Collaborating with schools and agencies helps ensure the best outcomes.
- Stay informed about services and supports available to your child.

Transition Planning and Interagency Support

- Transition planning begins at age 14 and continues through age 21.

- The IEP team will include representatives from agencies that provide adult services.

- Coordinated efforts ensure students are prepared for life after high school.

How to Access Interagency Services

- Attend IEP meetings to discuss which agencies should be involved.
-

- Request evaluations or referrals for services as needed.
-

- Research local, state, and federal programs that offer support for individuals with disabilities.

Resources for Interagency Collaboration

- Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (OVR): www.ovr.org
- Social Security Disability Services: www.ssa.gov
- Local Transition Coordinators
- Community Mental Health Services

Q&A

- Please contact the school with any questions.

Thank You

Contact for follow-up questions or additional support

lkeegan@sfsd.k12.pa.us

