

Warren County Board of Education Recognized with TSBA Board of Distinction Status

McMinnville, Tenn., September 23, 2024 – The Warren County Board of Education is pleased to announce it has once again achieved the Tennessee School Board Association's (TSBA) Board of Distinction status, recognizing its commitment to planning, policy, promotion and board development. The board has earned this recognition three times previously, in 2009, 2017, and 2019, and will maintain its distinction status from this cycle until 2026.

"The TSBA Board of Distinction status is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our board members. Their focus on doing all they can to help better our school district continues to place Warren County at the forefront of educational best practice," said Dr. Grant Swallows, Director of Schools, Warren County Schools.

To earn this prestigious designation, the board demonstrated compliance with key TSBA standards. These include comprehensive strategic planning, strong policy governance, and commitment to ethical leadership. The board also maintained effective collaboration with stakeholders and fulfilled professional development requirements, ensuring members were well-versed in education law and governance best practices.

Bill Zechman, recently retired board member, highlighted the importance of continuous education, saying, "The award also reflects the ongoing education of board members in school law and policy issues. The TSBA does excellent work in offering in-service training to board members, and we have all benefited greatly from these opportunities."

The TSBA Board of Distinction Award is granted to boards that meet strict requirements in leadership, accountability, and policy management. The Warren County Board of Education remains committed to these standards, providing consistent, high-quality governance to benefit students and educators in the district.
