The Woodstock Academy

FROM THE HEAD OF SCHOOL'S DESK

As I sit in my office on North Campus writing this letter for The Gleaner, I am reminded of the important role The Academy has played in this region's history and in the lives of so many people that have come before us. My office is completely decorated with artifacts related to the school's history.

The official portrait of Henry C. Bowen, which was painted by J.J. Sawyer and hung in Bowen's Brooklyn Heights mansion, hangs over the fireplace. An enamel portrait of President Ulysses Grant, which was a gift from the President when he visited Roseland Cottage on July 4, 1870, hangs in the lobby. The historic lectern from when the Academy Building opened in 1873 sits in my office, awaiting use at commencement. In addition to these treasures, I can hear construction noise emanating from outside as crews work to restore the Academy Building for its 150th anniversary. And just this morning, we had our first planning meeting about how best to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Bracken Memorial Library, which now occupies a space that was once called the Ely Ransom Hall Memorial Gymnasium.

Each of these historic and symbolic aspects of our beloved school reminds me each day of how appreciating our history plays such a significant role in determining the future of The Academy.

Serving as head of school for The Woodstock Academy is the honor of my lifetime, not only because I love its rich history, but because being a part of this community brings me so much pride. The staff, students, families, and alumni continually work to support the mission of this institution. Our teachers are some of the most creative and dedicated educators I have ever worked with.

The Academy families, alumni, and community members support our students and mission in many ways, whether it is through encouragement, financial assistance, or just being engaged in our educational community. Throughout this issue of the Gleaner, you will see some of this generous support and realize the impact it is having on our current students.

The Academy is in a strong position as we move forward in this ever-changing world. The historic nature of this institution is not an impediment, but a source of strength. The Academy continues to grow, improve, and provide more and more opportunities for students to achieve and become the people they are meant to be.

We have become a greater institution because of the people in our community. Your ongoing support is deeply appreciated.

SIMON BECHER

KICKING IT FROM COAST TO COAST

By Samantha Romero, Editor

For Vancouver Whitecaps FC Forward Simon Becher '18, one of the most exciting perks of a career in Major League Soccer is the element of the unknown. "You never know who you're going to meet, and you get to see and even live in parts of the world you'd never imagined you'd get the chance to experience," he shared.

Since graduating from The Woodstock Academy, Becher has been on the move, and the fluidity of footballer life suits him just fine. He initially enrolled at Holy Cross, but later transferred to St. Louis University, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts in finance and the title of SLU's Most Outstanding Male Athlete. He now calls Vancouver home, after being drafted by the Whitecaps Football Club last year. "This year I ended up in Vancouver, but in high school I got to go to Honduras and then I did an exchange in Argentina," said Becher. "I've played in Sweden, Holland, and England, and now I'm headed to Spain for our pre-season training. It's exciting—it keeps me on my toes."

His adventurous spirit and adaptability have taken Becher far, both on and off the field, but the day-to-day grind required to compete at such an elite level also demands tremendous discipline and commitment. In Becher's case, that means early mornings followed by several hours of training, workouts, stretches, and recovery work nearly every day. For him, it's worth it to be able to play the game he loves, and he's never been one to shy away from a challenge.

That fact was evident during Becher's time at The Academy, where his favorite class was International Relations. "I was a member of Model United Nations Club," he remembers. "We traveled all over for conferences and had to learn to work with new people in these competitive situations. Those experiences made me more confident in making decisions to move and travel as an adult."

WA also helped prepare him to navigate a multicultural workplace with teammates, coaches, and support staff from all over the world. "A good portion of the people I work with are from Central and South America—Argentina, Ecuador, and Mexico," said Becher. "The club offers us language courses, so I plan to take them up on it to improve my Spanish."

Whatever the 2023 MLS season has in store for him, Becher will be ready. "My time in high school taught me to step outside my comfort zone and never stop learning. New places, new people, new experiences—they're some of the best parts of my career." W

2022-23 TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Lauren Churchill, Music

For 2022-23 Teacher of the Year Lauren Churchill, her involvement with the music department at The Woodstock Academy provides her the unique opportunity to work with many of her students for four years. As her students grow through their high school careers, so do her connections with each of them.

"I feel very lucky to spend so much of these formative years teaching and helping students to grow into incredible humans," said Churchill, adding, "Whether I have a student for four years or one semester, I truly think of them as my kids and feel an immense amount of joy when I am able to help a student discover their strengths and build self-confidence."

Churchill has become heavily involved in all-things music in and out of the classroom during her fifteen years of teaching at The Academy. She teaches concert band, symphonic band, percussion prep, piano I, piano II, music theory ECE and unified music. In addition, she is a co-advisor for Tri-M Music Honor Society, conducts the jazz band, directs and conducts the annual spring musical, and manages the private music lesson program at The Academy.

While Churchill is widely recognized for her high-caliber ability to teach music to students of all experience levels, her students were eager to emphasize the impact she's made on them through her consistent display of kindness and positivity. Since re-introducing a sense of normalcy to the school community after shifting back to in-person learning, Churchill's classrooms have been especially noted as a space for students to safely express themselves and the challenges they face. During the nomination process for Teacher of the Year, a student wrote, "While I've been struggling, Mrs. Churchill has been with me every step of the way. She has so much love for all her students and when the going gets tough she doesn't shy away, she helps us with any problems we have."

Highlighting Churchill's commitment to providing a positive learning experience for all her students, Dr. Michael Harten, dean of academics at The Woodstock Academy, said, "Despite constantly shifting rules for mask-wearing and distancing requirements, Lauren has always put the students' safety and mental well-being first, while maintaining an enthusiastic outlook to buoy her students."

"It is difficult to put into words how honored I am to receive this recognition," said Churchill. "I love what I do and to be recognized in this way by my students and peers is truly amazing."

For five years, Paraprofessional Crista Peters has been known at The Woodstock Academy as a warm, positive human with a genuine dedication to helping students succeed.

Peters began her paraprofessional role floating around classrooms between students, helping them stay on task, answering any questions, and listening to each student's need and desire to excel. She is passionate about getting to know the entirety of her students; how they are doing, what they need, and creating an individualized experience for each student to get the very best out of them.

"Crista is an exceptionally kind person, always willing to meet students where they are, providing them support and encouragement to help them succeed. When we were remote last school year, Crista came in to run our Intensive Learning Lab so that students who were struggling with learning at home had a safe and supportive place to come in to complete their learning," said Dr. Michael Harten, dean of academics at The Woodstock Academy.

During the nomination process for Staff Member of the Year, it was clear that Peters is a well-loved presence in The Woodstock Academy community. One nomination from a faculty member wrote, "Crista does amazing work with students, often those with the greatest needs – students who often are resistant to that help. Her persistence, care, and dedication help break down those barriers."

Another nomination by a staff member read, "She is like the rung of a ladder, sometimes getting stepped on, but helping the students to climb higher."

Throughout the 2021-22 school year, Peters successfully managed Learning Assistance Block, a program designed for students who need additional academic support. In this role Peters had the opportunity to work with a variety of students during all four blocks and connected with them while building their trust and confidence to complete class assignments with independence. "Seeing the student feel like they can in fact do it, is priceless," Peters shared.

As Peters departed The Woodstock Academy community to pursue her next chapter, she left a lasting impact on all who worked with her, students and staff alike. She shared, "The Woodstock Academy is a unique and caring place to work, and always changing in a positive way with students in mind. I am extremely appreciative to have been part of such a special institution, and I am honored and truly touched to be voted for Staff Member of the Year." W

MEET A CENTAUR

MEET THREE SENIORS MAKING THE MOST OF THEIR WA EXPERIENCE

By Samantha Romero, Editor

AIDAN SODERMAN

Determined, Entertaining, and Intelligent—Aidan is all about our hands-on STEM courses! He credits WA's Aerospace courses, video production club, and theater tech with helping to prepare him to become an airline pilot and work in the live production industry someday.

"WA is not just another high school. I've had the opportunity to meet many bands and work with professional companies just because of the connections made at WA. The classes, teachers, and environment all help you become the best person you can be and help you figure out who you want to be."

CAROLINA DASILVA

Kind, Artistic, and Creative—Carolina loves English and music classes! She's a member of our Symphonic, Jazz, and Pep Bands, in addition to English Honors Society and Book Club, and after school she can be found teaching and performing various styles of dance.

"At The Woodstock Academy, there are many opportunities for group and community work, which emulates some of the roles and jobs I'll pursue in the future."

ALEENA JAFAR-DECESARE

Creative, Ambitious, and Bold—Aleena has made great use of their time at WA. She balances her love of language classes and media analysis with a passion for writing (she's WA's Poet Laureate) and singing as a member of WA's esteemed honors acapella ensemble—Hill Singers.

"The Woodstock Academy has presented me with leadership opportunities and allowed me to explore my passions. I feel that I have been able to truly focus on improving my current talents while also discovering new ones."

LAUREN ANDERSON '63

2022 Distinguished Alumni Award Recipient

By Madison Millar, Editor

On October 15, 2022, during Alumni Weekend, Woodstock Academy alumni, staff, and students gathered in Founder's Court to honor Lauren Anderson '63, the 2022 recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Award for Service to Society.

This award is given to an alumna/us that has shown an exceptional measure of service to The Woodstock Academy or to society. Awardees have made significant contributions benefitting their community, state, nation, world, or The Academy. Anderson's contributions and leadership as a pioneer for the advancement of Title IX, particularly for equality for women in sports, have made her an outstanding candidate for this award, and have inked her in athletic history at The Woodstock Academy and across Connecticut and Rhode Island.

At the ceremony, the opening remarks of the evening began with Rick Torgeson, whom Anderson has worked closely with throughout community-related projects and organizations. In his comments, he highlighted her service and commitment to the community at large, "making her presence known in soft ways." Associate Head of School Holly Singleton '86 followed, honoring Anderson with a moving outline of her athletic and professional achievements and impact on the world of women's sports. Head of School Chris Sandford closed the program and presented Anderson with her award.

When Anderson was a Woodstock Academy student, the athletic opportunities for girls were limited to softball, cheer, and basketball. In her senior year at The Academy, she was named outstanding female athlete. Upon graduating, Anderson became a five-sport collegiate athlete, competing on the field hockey, basketball, volleyball, softball, and track & field teams during her undergraduate years at Southern Connecticut State University.

"We talk about graduates from The Academy going on to change the world and Lauren quite literally accomplished that. She has made our world a better place and serves as an inspiration for us all. I could not be prouder to recognize Lauren with the Distinguished Alumni Award for Service to Society," said Sandford.

Where Anderson saw athletic limitations and discouragement for female athletes, she fought to create opportunities. In 1972, Anderson started the girls indoor and outdoor track teams at North Haven High School, and in 1975, became the first female scholastic athletic director in the State of Connecticut. In 1977, she launched the women's cross country program at the University of Rhode Island, and the track & field program in 1978. She then went on to serve as the Senior Associate Director of Athletics in 2003 until she retired in 2008.

Throughout her career in athletic administration, Anderson continued to advocate for athletic equity and presented to the State of Rhode Island that there was a need to support full-time head coaching positions for women's programs as they were only part-time, compared to men's programs, which had full-time coaching positions. A year later, permanent full-time coaching positions for women's athletic programs were approved by the State.

"When I think of Lauren, I think the greatest accomplishments of her life are not her personal athletic accolades, but rather the use of her athletic prowess and the knowledge to lift up other future athletes," said Singleton.

Anderson has been honored with numerous achievement awards and inducted into 10 Athletic Halls of Fame, including the inaugural Woodstock Academy Athletic Hall of Fame in 2012. Anderson's legacy also includes her strong commitment to diversity and equality, and the transformational opportunities she has created in women's athletics at The Woodstock Academy and beyond. Her portrait will be displayed in the Grube Galerie, a hallway at The Academy dedicated to distinguished alumni.

"To the Alumni Advisory Board and Brad Favreau who selected me for this award, I thank you. This is quite an honor, tremendously. I credit many, many people for motivating me to do what I have done, and what I hope to continue to do. Everyone has given me unwavering support and it has really meant a lot to me," said Anderson.

In October 2022, Anderson was inducted into the Connecticut Women's Hall of Fame at the 29th Annual Induction Ceremony and Celebration of Women in Sports. The Connecticut Women's Hall of Fame honors the achievements of women by celebrating their legacies and telling their powerful stories, inspiring women and girls to realize their own limitless potential. BRACKEN MEMORIAL LIBRARY:

100 YEARS OF SUPPORTING LIFELONG LEARNING

The Bracken Memorial Library will celebrate its centennial anniversary in 2024! Originally housed in what is now the Bracken Administrative Center, our current library resides in the old Hall Memorial Gymnasium, where some of our alumni might recall gathering for lunch, school dances, gym classes and study halls. Countless memories have been made within its four walls, and the library continues to serve as an integral part of both our campus and our community.

In the summer of 2023, we will begin much-needed renovations to update this historic and special space. The carpeting will be removed to expose and refinish the hardwood floors, preserving the original character of the building. Installation of a new HVAC system will help maintain the integrity of the texts and artwork housed in the space, in addition to making the library more comfortable for visitors year-round.

We will be officially launching the Bracken 100 campaign to fund this important anniversary project in April of 2023, when the Bracken Memorial Library will host the opening of The Life and Legacy of Caroll Spinney, a year-long art installation featuring the work of the world-famous artist and puppeteer. A Woodstock resident, Spinney was perhaps best known for playing the roles of Big Bird on the award-winning PBS children's program, Sesame Street. The exhibit features several works of art and puppets created by Spinney, including Oscar the Grouch. We hope you'll join us on April 20 at 5:30 p.m. in the Bracken Memorial Library as we celebrate this significant milestone!

The Woodstock Academy

ADVANCING OUR WA COMMUNITY

This year has been all about the Academy Building. Without a doubt, it is the anchor of the Academy's landscape and a favorite among alumni, faculty, and students. The InSpire 150 campaign for the Academy Building has allowed for its complete renovation, and just in time for its 150th anniversary, it will reopen this fall. I want to thank the greater Woodstock Academy community who responded to the call and together committed more than $1 million to the campaign. We will announce plans for a grand-re-opening event as the timeline becomes more definitive, and I hope you will come back at some point to see the work that has been done. It will be a point of significant pride for alumni, students, and all of us who work here at WA.

Throughout 2022, we were able to engage with our alumni in more of a "normal" sense again. Whether in Woodstock for Alumni Weekend, in California, Florida, or Washington DC, we are actively working to build relationships with more of our alumni. This will continue as we move forward, and we have plans for traveling to connect throughout 2023 and another fantastic Alumni Weekend with Hall of Fame and Hall of Excellence inductions this coming fall. Classes of 1998 and 1973, get ready to celebrate your 25th and 50th reunions!

The Class of 2023 is getting ready to graduate and they are doing it in style. There have been an incredible number of students who have made early commitments and they will be attending some of the finest higher education institutions in the country, serving in multiple branches of the military, and enrolling in trade schools. This class has not had the typical high school experience that many of us enjoyed as their freshman and sophomore years saw academics, athletics, the arts, and almost every other extra-curricular activity struggle through the COVID-19 pandemic. As the saying goes, this class took the lemons they were dealt and made lemonade – time and time again. We are extremely proud of what they have accomplished and what they have yet to do.

We are working on the next phase of exciting developments to enhance the student experience here at WA, and we look forward to sharing those at some point soon. We continue to be grateful for the support of so many in our community as we work to deliver the best opportunities for our students.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY!

2022 Saw 2 Jeopardy! Appearances from Members of the WA Community

By Samantha Romero, Editor

In February of 2022, WA Class of 2018 alum August Guszkowski, a then-senior at Dartmouth College, took the Jeopardy! stage to take part in the National College Championship. In November of the same year, WA's Dean of Academics Dr. Mike Harten stepped into the Jeopardy! spotlight as well. Both share a fondness for the classic quiz gameshow that is rooted in their childhoods, and though neither walked away with the win, they both agree that the friendships forged throughout the experience are truly invaluable.

"I'm glad I got to do something that's been a part of my life since I was a kid," said Harten. He'd taken the online Jeopardy! test and been interviewed by their staff in the past but had never been offered the chance to compete. Then, in mid-September of 2022, he received a call from SONY Studios asking him to be a contestant. "They don't give you a lot of notice and you're not allowed to tell anyone," he shared. "I flew out for Indigenous Peoples' Day Weekend for two days of filming."

For Guszkowski, the boredom of early Covid lockdown inspired the Classic Languages and Literatures major to take the online quiz. They were stunned when they were interviewed and invited to film for the week-long college tournament over Thanksgiving break in 2021.

The actual process of filming Jeopardy! was full of surprises for Guszkowski and Harten, both lifelong fans. "The set is so much smaller than it looks on TV. It's smaller than [WA's] Bates Auditorium," recalled Harten. Guszkowski echoed that sentiment and added that it's also "freezing cold because they keep the temperature low so your make up doesn't melt off." And though neither knew what to expect from their competition, Guszkowski and Harten were both delighted by the company kept with their opponents while watching others compete from the green room. "It's exactly like watching at home," explained Harten, "except you're with some of the best Jeopardy! players in the world and we're all shouting out answers and cheering on some of the people we've just met. It was a lot of fun."

As for the game itself, Guszkowski admits they were "wracked with anxiety," while Harten said he was able to relax and "go into game mode," while behind the podium. One of the greatest challenges for both players was timing the buzzer. "What a lot of people don't realize when they're watching from home is that we aren't allowed to buzz in until blue lights that are just off-camera on the sides of the Jeopardy! board light up," explained Harten. "They don't light up until the host is done reading the clue, and if you buzz in too early you get locked out."

"Some people swear by the lights. Others time it by the speaker," said Guszkowski. Harten admits, "you have to almost decide to buzz in before you're 100% sure you know the answer."

Although neither contestant was able to claim the title of Jeopardy! champion, they are grateful for the experience. "I thought everyone on the show was going to be aggressively competitive. Turns out they were all cool and pleasant and fun to hang out with. We still have a group chat going," said Guszkowski. Harten agrees that "meeting some amazing people" was one of his favorite parts of being on Jeopardy!, and that "being a part of that community forever is fun."

Since the Quiet Corner seems to be supplying a disproportionate number of Jeopardy contestants lately (Guszkowski's father recently had a strong showing himself), one wonders which member of the WA community should be next to grace the Alex Trebek stage in Los Angeles. Harten has some WA faculty members in mind. "I bet Josh Welch (Physics) would do well on Jeopardy! Rich Telford (English) would also be great. And Meghan Mizak (English) would be good too—she'd be fast!" W

WELCOMING DISPLACED UKRAINIAN STUDENTS

On February 24, 2022, Russia again invaded further into Ukraine in what was a major escalation of the ongoing international conflict between the two countries. The war caused hundreds of thousands of Ukrainian lives to flip upside down in a matter of minutes, leaving them displaced with nowhere to go. Watching the devastating news flood the media, The Woodstock Academy began working with its global educational partners to welcome students from Ukraine who were displaced due to the war.

Between March and April of 2022, The Academy worked out logistics for obtaining the necessary documentation for international study, equipping the boarding environment, and tailoring to the specific educational and medical needs of each student. The first student arrived on March 21, and by late May, six more students joined her.

In support of the mission of helping these students, The Academy received overwhelming support from the community through donations to the Fund for Displaced Students to cover tuition, as well as donations of clothing, hospitality, transportation, translation services, and much, much more.

"I really appreciate the school and all of the people who support us and let us know we aren't alone." - Jules '25

Upon arrival, they jumped into classes, participated in spring break activities, ResLife trips to Boston, Newport, and the beach, and made the most of their opportunity to be here. At the end of the 2021-22 school year, the students moved off campus for the summer into various homestays, summer camps, and homes of family friends.

Now, one year later, the war is still ongoing, and all seven of the Ukrainian students returned to The Academy. Each of them has found their home away from home on South Campus and has created long-lasting relationships with ResLife students, dorm parents, athletic teammates, classmates, teachers, and their fellow Ukrainian peers.

While they are grateful for their unique WA experiences, not a day goes by when they don't miss their beloved country and worry about the safety of their loved ones back home. Jules, Yehor, Anna M., Anna H., Sasha, Renata, and Taiysa have all made a significant impact on the WA community and will embark on their new journeys as informed, compassionate, and ambitious global citizens in their next chapters. Senior Yehor Bezshchasnyi will be attending Columbia University in the fall of 2023, and most others also plan to stay in America to further their education and seize whatever opportunities come their way. W
