Nevada's Week of Respect, September 30 - October 4, is an opportunity to explore what respect means to students, staff, and families, acknowledging that respect is a fundamental value of our education system. The Week of Respect highlights efforts that take place year round to prevent and address bullying/cyber-bullying and create safe and respectful learning environments.

The Nevada Department of Education would like to hear from students about what respect and belonging mean to them. Responses may be shared on NDE social media platforms, and included in professional learning for educators. Could you please share this form with any students who would like to provide input?
