Literacy	Unit-Specific Reading: The WJEC Criminology course requires reading specific case studies, real-life examples, and theoretical explanations of crime and deviance. Each unit—whether about criminological theories or understanding the criminal justice system—contains explicit reading elements in the form of textbooks, case materials, and legislation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Reports and Studies: Students are often asked to read crime reports, legal documents, and studies related to criminal justice reforms or crime statistics, which help them engage with the real-world applications of criminological concepts. Reading Laws and Policies: Criminology involves understanding laws and policies which students need to read and interpret, such as criminal statutes, sentencing guidelines, and policing strategies.

SMSC	Spiritual Development: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Understanding Moral Reasoning in Crime: Criminology encourages students to reflect on the ethical implications of crime and punishment, including the spiritual and moral dimensions of concepts like justice, forgiveness, and rehabilitation. Impact of Crime on Victims: The course covers the emotional and psychological impact of crime on victims, encouraging students to reflect on human suffering and the capacity for resilience and recovery. Moral Development: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Ethical Dilemmas in the Criminal Justice System: Students engage in discussions about the morality of different forms of punishment, the death penalty, restorative justice, and rehabilitation, exploring what constitutes just and fair treatment in the criminal justice system. Moral Responsibility and Crime: Theories of criminal behavior (e.g., biological, psychological, and sociological explanations) encourage students to consider the moral responsibility of individuals who commit crimes and the role of society in addressing criminality. Social Development: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Crime and Social Control: Criminology helps students understand how societies use laws, norms, and institutions to maintain order. This teaches students about social responsibility and the importance of lawful behavior and respect for authority. Social Impact of Crime: Students learn about how crime affects different social groups and communities, fostering an understanding of social cohesion and the role individuals can play in supporting safer communities. Cultural Development: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Crime Across Cultures: The course explores how different societies and cultures define and respond to crime, promoting cultural understanding and respect for diverse approaches to justice and law enforcement. Media Representations of Crime: Criminology includes the study of how crime is portrayed in the media and the cultural narratives that shape public perceptions of criminals and victims, encouraging students to critically reflect on cultural stereotypes and biases.
British Values	Rule of Law: The entire criminology course is centered on the rule of law, examining criminal behavior, legal systems, and the role of the police and judiciary. Students explore how the legal system upholds societal values, such as justice and fairness, which align with British values. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Democracy and Individual Liberty: Criminology covers theories of punishment, human rights, and legal reforms in the criminal justice system. Discussions on sentencing, rehabilitation, and the rights of individuals within the legal system tie into individual liberty and democratic principles. Mutual Respect and Tolerance: Topics related to victims, offenders, and societal responses to crime encourage understanding and empathy for diverse social groups. Students explore issues such as discrimination in sentencing or treatment of minority groups, fostering respect for all individuals regardless of background
Cultural Capital	Understanding the Criminal Justice System: Criminology gives students cultural capital by helping them understand how the criminal justice system works in the UK and beyond, including how laws are created and enforced. This enables students to engage with societal debates around crime, justice, and human rights. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Exploration of Crime in Different Cultures: Students examine how different cultures define and respond to crime, offering them a global perspective on criminal justice and how social norms shape laws and behavior in different societies. Impact of Media on Crime Perception: The analysis of how the media portrays crime and criminals provides insight into how cultural narratives are constructed and how these narratives influence public perception. Understanding media influence is a key aspect of modern cultural capital. Ethical and Moral Debates: The course encourages students to think critically about moral and ethical issues surrounding crime and punishment, helping them to develop their ability to engage in debates on important social issues.
