

Does it help students to submit their applications early in November?

A: For UC's purposes, it does not matter if the application is submitted earlier or later in the month. All on-time (submitted by Dec. 2) applications are reviewed in the same way.

Can students change information on the application once it's been submitted?

A: Once the application has been submitted, only contact information and self-reported tests scores can be updated online. Please remind your students to carefully review the entire completed application before submission.

I dropped a class after the first semester. Do I need to let the UC's know?

A: Yes, you should report it. See the above answer. Don't stand the chance of not reporting it, because at the end of the year, you will HAVE to send an official transcript and they will verify what you reported. If it doesn't match, you may run of the risk of getting your acceptance rescinded. Remember, it's a provisional (conditional) acceptance.

Will the change in my senior year schedule affect the admission decision?

A: It's hard to say because everyone is different and everything is examined case by case. It may matter to one UC but not another. Either way, you should report any changes like if you dropped a class.

When will I hear from the UC's about their admission decisions?

A: You should hear about March

Do I need to take the SAT Subject tests for admissions?

A: They are not a required part of the admissions process. But there are some competitive majors that highly suggest that you take subject tests.

What if I took classes through OFL? How do I input those classes on my application?

A: The only classes you should be inputting on your UC and Cal state applications are A-G classes only. Be sure to type out the entire name, Opportunities For Learning. It does not matter which location you took the classes at. Usually your options are Baldwin Hills or Irwindale.
