Crusader Chronicles

Good Shepherd Catholic School

The economy must serve people, not the other way around. Work is more than a way to make a living;it is a form of continuing participation in God's creation. If the dignity of work is to be protected, then the basic rights of workers must be respected – the right to productive work, to decent and fair wages, to the organization and joining of unions, to private property, and to economic initiative- United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

The fifth theme of Catholic Social Teaching provides much for our consideration about the nature of work and the rights of those who work. From the first book in the Bible – Genesis - we read that God that "The LORD God then took the man and settled him in the garden of Eden, to cultivate and care for it" (Gen 2:15). We learn that work is indeed important, not only because it provides the means to make a living, but also because it engages us in the work of God – creation.

Each of us is engaged in the ongoing work of God by the work that we do. Therefore, whatever work we do is holy because it is of God. The manner in which we accomplish our work, namely, the honesty of our time, the quality of the work, the care given to it, and the value we place on it must also be holy. This week, reflect upon these attributes as they relate to your work. Is your work holy?
