About 15 freshman members of the Concordia College football team will visit Eagles Elementary School first graders for recess and lunch this Friday. The Cobbers will aim to promote sportsmanship and be positive role models for the first graders.

In preparation for the visit, the first graders have been working on playing fair, including others, and exercising their bodies during recess. They will be able to show off these skills to their collegiate counterparts as they play together.

After recess, the football players will join the first graders for lunch. Each table in the lunchroom will have at least one football player sitting with them for the day. As they dine together, the students will have the opportunity to chat with the players, learn important lessons from their visiting mentors, and enjoy each other's company.
