Weighing in on Weight

This week, the kids will be grappling with weight, focusing on ounces and pounds, but also learning about grams and kilograms. Each child will have a turn to guess the weight of a small, medium, and large pumpkin and the winner (announced at the end of the week) will get to take their pumpkin home. Thank you to Quinn's mom, Lindsay, for not only buying the pumpkins, but also being willing to come in and help with the guessing process.

Pumpkin Art This Week

Leo's mom, Sarah, is our class Art Docent (thank you, Sarah!) and will be here on Tuesday to do a pumpkin art lesson with the kids. We're super excited and it's perfect timing paired with our pumpkin guesses.

4th Grade Buddies

The kids did a great job on Friday reading with their 4th Grade Buddies. Did your child tell you that we made book marks for them and they made book marks for us?!? They learned about each other through interviews two weeks ago, then used that new knowledge to inform their book mark creation :)

Assessments

I can't believe it, but it's already time to start assessing kids for report cards. I'll be weaving in assessments over the next couple of weeks. If your child is absent, he/she will need to make them up in the mornings before school. Just FYI. Thanks.

We're Performing on Friday!

Together with Ms. Hamilton's class, we'll be performing "Mr. Bones" at Friday's assembly :) Please join us if you can! (And if not, I'll try to post a video to Seesaw) If your child happens to have a skeleton t-shirt of any kind, please have him/her wear it. And if not, please don't buy anything extra. The Boo-by-the-Sea shirts from a couple years ago work great, too!

Nature Walk / Book Creator Books

I hope you had a chance to read and enjoy your child's sweet Nature Walk book on Seesaw Friday (they may have had a different title than that). Taking photos around campus last week seemed like a fun activity for the kids and I think they did a very sweet job of including their "Owl Moon sentences" with sensory description and/or adjectives. I'm so proud of the effort and heart these kids put into their work!

October is turning out to be an absolutely gorgeous month! Enjoy ~ Ms. Boyesen
