There always seems to be more Halloween candy around than anybody knows what to do with. Kids overfill their bags while trick or treating and adults end up with candy left in the bowl after kids the kids stop ringing their doorbell. The fourth grade gifted and talented students at Lewis & Clark Elementary School came up with a perfect way to get rid of that left-over candy while showing their appreciation for local veterans, active military members, and first responders.

They organized a school candy drive from November 1-8 to fill care packages for local current and former service men and women. Student mentors from South High School will visit Lewis & Clark from 12:15-1 p.m. on Friday to help sort and pack the candy. And together they will write letters of gratitude to thank the veterans, military members, and first responders for their service.

On Veterans Day, Monday, November 11, the student mentors from South will deliver the packages and letters of gratitude to the VA Hospital, the Fargo Air National Guard Base, and local fire stations, police stations, and EMT stations.
