Board approves district’s strategic plan

In October, the Harrisonville Schools Board of Education approved a strategic plan that will guide the district’s work for the next five years. Development of the plan took seven months and involved community members, parents, staff, and students.

The district’s Strategic Planning Committee began the work in late February spending two and a half days discussing and creating the foundations of the strategic plan. The group developed beliefs, parameters, objectives and a new mission statement - Harrisonville Schools is committed to academic excellence to inspire life-long learners and develop contributing citizens through a positive and safe environment.

The Committee then developed the basis of the plan - seven strategic areas to focus the district’s work. Those areas are Community Partnerships, Early Childhood Education, Quality Staff, Safety, Student Achievement, Technology and Well-Being.

The work was then turned over to Action Teams. During a community meeting in April, these Action

Teams took shape and each team was tasked with creating action plans to carry out the strategies developed by the Strategic Planning Committee. These Action Teams worked for five months on those plans and presented them back to the Committee in late September.

Once the Committee heard and agreed with the teams’ work, they sent the full Strategic Plan to the Board of Education for approval.

With the plan’s approval, the work has begun. The Action Teams developed 29 action plans for the next five years and this year, the district is focusing on seven of those action plans. The plans include expansion of preschool, implementing a before- and after-school childcare program, increasing retention of staff, enhancing open lines of communication in the area of safety, implementing Professional Learning Communities, delivering a guaranteed and viable curriculum, and implementing age-appropriate plans for cell phone and wearable technology usage.

Each year, the Board and community will be updated on progress made on the Strategic Plan. The

Superintendent outlines first steps of strategic plan

As we approach the end of the first semester and head into the holiday season, it's a perfect time to reflect on all the great things happening in our school district this year.

We began the year strong with the finalization of our district's strategic plan. This five-year plan will serve as a roadmap for focused academic growth and prioritized student success. (See page 1)

Alongside our academic efforts, we've also seen numerous athletic and activity accomplishments that continue to foster community pride. (See page 3)

We are also excited to announce that our state accountability measurement (APR) has increased for the last two years. This year's increase is a direct reflection of the commitment our staff has to academic excellence and the continued support and involvement of our families in their children's education. Thank you to everyone for playing a part in this success!

Looking ahead, a key priority of our strategic plan is expanding preschool opportunities and providing before- and after-school care for our kindergarten through fifth grade students.

As we finalized the plan, it became clear that there is an urgent need to increase preschool offerings and support for working families through wrap-around care. To accommodate this growth, we will be making some important adjustments for the 2025-2026 school year, including shifting some grade levels and school configurations.

What does this mean for our schools?

In order to increase space available for expanded preschool at Harrisonville Early Childhood Center, kindergarten will move to Harrisonville Elementary School (HES) beginning in the 2025-26 school year. HES will continue to house first and second grades. McEowen will then accommodate third, fourth, and fifth grades, taking advantage of available space at that facility. We will communicate further details as the year progresses.

Preschool Expansion

We're excited to expand preschool offerings, which will include full-day programs for both three- and four-year-olds. We plan to also offer wrap-around care options for families. This would mean that families could pay for care before and after preschool hours if needed. This expansion to full day preschool with wrap-around care options will offer more flexibility for working families. We hope to begin filling classes early next semester to determine our capacity. Stay tuned for more information on preschool registration!

Before- and After-School Care for K-5 Students

We also recognize the need for before- and after-school care for kindergarten through fifth grade students. We are hoping to launch this program next year as well, which will allow families to drop students off before school and pick them up after school. This program will also be a paid opportunity, and while we are in the planning stages, we will share more details as the program develops.

As you can see, we are making great strides in providing more opportunities and services for our students and families. We are deeply grateful for the support and dedication of our families, staff, and community members. Your commitment plays a vital role in the success of our district and the growth of our students.

As we move into the holiday season, I encourage everyone to take time to appreciate one another, reflect on the year, and recharge for the months ahead. Thank you for all you do to support our schools and students. We wish you a joyful and peaceful holiday season!

Warm regards,

Josh Chastain, Ed.D.

A look back at first semester highlights: New opportunities,

AT THE PAVILION: In early October, we celebrated the "official" opening of the Cass Career Center Pavilion. During the ribbon-cutting event, CCC Director Anne Hickman thanked those who made the project possible including major donors who will be recognized on a permanent sign and with a tree planted on the site. Adult and Community Education Coordinator Emily Davis outlined the possibilities for use of the pavilion by the community and Assistant Director Nichole Tews shared how it has already been used by both students and staff. CCC Student Ambassadors were on hand as hosts for the event. The ribbon cutting included members of the Board of Education, major donors, and Harrisonville Area Chamber of Commerce Ambassadors. For more information on pavilion usage, visit our website - <https://www.casscareercenter.com/news-information/ccc-pavilion>.

BEYOND VOLLEYBALL: In early October, the Wildcat volleyball team hosted a benefit game to support the Ragsdale family. Owen Ragsdale, a first grader, recently lost his battle with cancer. At the game, admission was by donation and the team hosted a basket auction, bake sale, and 50/50 raffle. Prior to the game, the team sold special Fight for Owen shirts. During the event, members of the HHS Music Makers sang the National Anthem and the Silver Sensations performed. The event raised more than $9,000 for the Ragsdale family.

FOR OUR VETERANS: Harrisonville Middle School honored veterans with a special assembly which was attended by the entire student body on Friday, November 8. All local veterans were invited to the event. The keynote address was provided by Harrisonville High School alum Karley Reynolds. The event also included performances by the school's choir, the Wildcat Chorale; the National Anthem performed by the HMS 8th grade band; a performance by the HMS jazz band, and poetry readings by two students selected from the school's poetry contest. During the assembly, veterans were thanked for their service and each stood during the choir's performance of a military song medley. The event closed with the playing of "Taps."

AROUND OUR SCHOOLS: This fall, Board of Education members had the opportunity to visit each school in the district during the school day to see students and teachers in action. The Board Walkthroughs included an overview presentation from the building principal before board members visited classrooms.

continuing traditions, community involvement and support

ON THE STAGE: Harrisonville High School presented their fall musical, Mamma Mia! in November over three nights in the Performing Arts Center. The production included nearly 70 students working both on stage and behind the scenes.

IN THE COURTROOM: In November, Harrisonville Middle School eighth graders took the law into their own hands as they staged a mock trial. The students studied the events of the Boston Massacre and decided who really started the violence that night, the Redcoat soldiers or the American Colonists. The trial took place in the historic Cass County Courthouse.

WITH CALM FOCUS: HES students now have a new space to help them succeed in school thanks to a grant from the Variety Children's Charity of Greater Kansas City. HES special education teacher Sara Doherty saw the need for a Sensory Room at the school and submitted a grant. "Our special education students in the SEAL (Social Emotional Autism Language) room have individual scheduled breaks in the room each day, but it is not just our special education students that are getting use out of this room. It is very helpful for students who come in and are having a rough morning. They can use the room to get calm and reset for the day."

FROM THE BEGINNING: Harrisonville Parents As Teachers is a free program available to all district families with children under school age. PAT hosts bi-monthly playgroup events on Mondays at 9:30 a.m. at Harrisonville Early Childhood Center. It's an hour for families and caregivers to play, connect, and just have fun. PAT also hosts evening events for families. This fall, they hosted Touch-a-Truck, Story Book Cooks, and Messy Play. Spring events include Wild & Wacky on Jan. 22, Block Play on Feb. 13, and Tool Time on March 5. All events are free and held from 6-7 p.m. at Harrisonville Early Childhood Center, 500 Eastwood Road.

FOLLOWING TRADITIONS: The annual Homecoming festivities included a spirit week, high school pep rally, candidate parade through the schools, parade, coronation, football game, and high school dance. The Homecoming parade is always a highlight for the entire community as students, families, and community members line the route. This year's theme was Road Trip: All Roads Lead Home and earning parade awards were Harrisonville Elementary School, first place (pictured); girls' basketball, second place; and Silver Sensations, third place. The Homecoming King and Queen were Luke DeVenney and Audrey Coffey. Runners-up were Brandon Phillips and Kayleigh Norris,

Instructional Coaches work to support teachers, enhance learning

This school year, Harrisonville Elementary School and McEowen Elementary School welcomed two new instructional coaches to their teams: Missy Eddleman at HES (top photo) and Tara Drabant at McEowen (bottom photo). These experienced educators are helping to improve the learning experience for students by providing essential support to teachers.

What is an instructional coach?

Instructional coaches work behind the scenes to support teachers in ways that directly benefit students. They help align lesson plans with state standards, analyze data to guide teaching, and provide professional development opportunities. Missy and Tara work with teachers to ensure students receive high-quality, consistent instruction that meets their individual needs.

Missy explains, “My role at HES is to provide support for teachers in the instructional setting. I’m involved in looking at standards that need to be covered in grades K-5 and helping teachers figure out the best ways to teach those so that all our students receive the same instruction.”

Tara echoes a similar focus, sharing that at McEowen, “I facilitate weekly grade-level collaboration meetings, work with teams to align units and assessments, and provide the resources teachers need to do their best teaching.”

How do instructional coaches impact students?

While Missy and Tara primarily work with teachers, their ultimate goal is to improve student learning. Both coaches focus on what educators call “Tier 1 instruction,” the core teaching that happens in every classroom. By ensuring lessons are well-planned and supported with the right resources, the coaches are improving learning opportunities for all students.

Missy highlights the importance of collaboration, saying, “We spend a lot of time looking at our units and assessments to determine what we need to do to help all our learners.”

Tara adds, “By building relationships with teachers and supporting their unique teaching styles, I’m able to help make adjustments that truly impact student learning.”

What does support look like in action?

The role of an instructional coach varies based on teachers’ needs. Missy spends time mentoring new teachers, helping them observe and learn from experienced colleagues. She also assists teachers in unpacking standards to better understand what is required in their lessons.

Tara, on the other hand, has been a hands-on resource for teachers navigating new technology and planning lessons for unfamiliar subjects.

“I’ve even stepped in to cover classes,” Tara shares, “so teachers can observe a colleague or attend a meeting.” She’s also worked to streamline planning by creating tools like a rubric for unit plans, which one teacher described as “a game changer.”

The bigger picture

For Principal Tricia Falke at McEowen, the value of having an instructional coach is clear. “Having Tara be someone that staff can count on when it comes to asking for help, getting questions answered, or just a place to vent has been a huge benefit to our teachers,” she explains. “She sees problems and formulates solutions. She is selfless with her time and talent.”

Fifth grade teacher Taylor

Brown echoed Dr. Falke’s sentiments. “She is able to take questions we have and deep dive into our curriculum resources to provide best possible feedback and guidance. This takes time and allows for us teachers to not scramble while trying to teach and plan.”

Missy and Tara bring years of classroom experience to their roles. Missy taught 4th and 5th grade for 20 years and holds advanced degrees in Curriculum and Instruction as well as Elementary Administration. Tara has taught multiple grade levels during her 12-year career and holds a Master’s degree in Educational Leadership. Their shared passion for supporting teachers and improving education makes them an invaluable addition to our schools.

The work of instructional coaches is often behind the scenes, but the results are visible in the success of students and teachers alike. As our district continues to focus on academic growth, Missy and Tara are helping ensure every student receives the best education possible.

Drum majors exemplify involvement opportunities

Students at Harrisonville High School have the chance to explore many interests, and this fall, junior Ethan Stone and senior Brierly Hasek showed just how involved students can be. As drum majors for the Royal Regiment, they led their peers during pregame and halftime shows, but their responsibilities didn't stop there. Ethan often rushed from the drum major stand to the football field, while Brierly transitioned from conducting the band to performing with the dance team—all in the same night.

Balancing multiple commitments is nothing new for either student. Ethan is involved in football, basketball, baseball, band, show band, and serves as president of the FFA chapter. He said that support from his family and his faith help him manage all his activities.

He said his involvement “keeps me busy and out of trouble.”

Brierly also wears many hats at HHS. In addition to leading the band, she participates in jazz band, Music Makers, Drama Club, Wildcat Network, and dance team. This fall, she also played a main role in the musical, Mamma Mia! She did all this while managing a heavy academic load that includes UCM Composition.

Her secret to juggling everything? Repetition and focus. “There’s no real rhyme or reason,” she admitted. “I just repeat what I need to remember over and over until it’s second nature. It’s easier said than done, but it works for me.”

They both added that high school involvement could be helpful in their future.

Ethan said, “You never know where a career opportunity might come from so I would recommend being involved in as many activities as possible.”

Brierly added, “High school is a time of your life where ultimately your extracurriculars are not as intense as they would be in college, along with it's a time for you to, so to say, dip your toes in the water and see what you enjoy doing before going to college where it is much more intense.”

She added, “On top of all of that, if you are involved with more things in high school, you prove to college admissions your commitment, time management, and leadership skills that you have acquired through being in many activities.”

Both Ethan and Brierly are thankful for the opportunities at HHS.

“We’re lucky to be in a school district that allows students to participate in so many activities,” Ethan said.

Brierly added, “Not every school has this kind of flexibility. It’s amazing to see so many options and communities for students to join.”

Their ability to juggle so many responsibilities shows just how much HHS students can achieve. Whether on the field, stage, or podium, Ethan and Brierly are great examples of how being involved can make high school a more rewarding experience.

New video series to provide information for everyone

The district has started a new video series to share information with our parents and community. Chats with Chastain is an opportunity for anyone to learn more about what’s happening in the school district. Each month, we will produce a new video on a topic of specific interest.

The first video focused on the district’s strategic plan with Superintendent Chastain outlining the process and outcome (see QR code on page 2). The second video was focused on academics and the district’s work to ensure a guaranteed and viable curriculum (Strategic Plan 5.4) with Assistant Superintendent Annie Knox.

For each topic, the video is posted on the district’s YouTube channel - www.youtube.com/HarrisonvilleSchools and Facebook page - www.facebook.com/HarrisonvilleSchools. Look for a new video during the second week of each month.

If you have a question about a Chats with Chastain topic or a suggestion for a future topic, please reach out via email to josh.chastain@harrisonvilleschools.org.
