Mental Health Corner

Pay attention to your emotions. It is important to stay in tune with how you're feeling so you can make changes when necessary. Meditation and mindfulness exercises are great to take a breather and escape from everyday stressors. This can look different from person to person, but it can help to separate yourself and think about all of the positives around you. Being present, feeling your breath, or having a few minutes of silence can all be exercises in gratitude when you practice focusing on the positive
