May the 4th

May the Fourth, or Star Wars Day, is a fun day for all Star Wars fans to enjoy celebrating their favorite intergalactic world. The name May the Fourth sounds like the famous phrase, "May the force be with you" which Jedi Masters say to one another for good luck. This phrase was first officially used on May 4th 1979, which was the day after Margaret Thatcher was elected as the prime minister of the United Kingdom.

Her political party placed an ad on the evening news saying, "May the Fourth be with You Maggie." For years, May the Fourth was ignored by most of the public until it was official announced as Star Wars Day in 2019 because of Disneyland's Galaxy's Edge being opened to the public. Star Wars Day is a day for fans to celebrate this unique story with lovable characters across the galaxy.

Cinco de Mayo

Many people believe that Cinco de Mayo is Mexico's Independence Day. This is NOT true!

Mexican Independence Day is actually on September 16th. On May 5th, Cinco de Mayo is celebrated in Mexico and other countries like the United States. It celebrates the victory of Mexican forces in the Battle of Puebla over Napoleon III's French forces in 1862. People in the Mexican state of Puebla celebrate Cinco de Mayo with speeches, parades, and reenactments of the battle. Cinco de Mayo translates to May the fifth, similar to America's Fourth of July. That is why Americans are often confused with what Cinco de Mayo represents.

The official dish of Cinco de Mayo is Mole Poblano. Mole Poblano is a chocolate and chili sauce that is often served on top of meat with tortillas.
