The Pyramid Model

The Pyramid Model assists programs in their implementation of sustainable systems for supporting Social and Emotional Competencies in young children. It is supported by the Minnesota Centers of Excellence and focuses on social, emotional and behavioral outcomes of young children, reducing the use of inappropriate discipline practices, promoting family engagement, using data for decision-making, integrating early childhood mental health consultation and fostering inclusion.

Zones of Regulation

Classroom teachers introduce Zones of Regulation, a social-emotional learning curriculum that is an empowering instructional tool to build safe, supportive environments that foster learning and well-being for all. Students benefit from:

- Increased self-awareness and social and emotional skills
- A common language for communication, problem-solving, and emotional understanding
- More time spent on learning instead of on behavior management
- A healthier, more inclusive school climate
