Pomegranate Birthstone?
Garnet, January's birthstone, is most commonly associated with a dark red color. This deep red shade is often likened to the color of a pomegranate seed, which is how the garnet got its name. The word "garnet" comes from the Latin word "granatum," meaning pomegranate. While red is the most traditional and recognizable color for garnets, they can also be found in a range of other colors including green, orange, pink, and even blue, depending on their chemical composition. The history of garnet dates back thousands of years - Ancient Egyptians used garnets as inlays in their jewelry and carvings, believing they possessed protective powers. In Roman times, garnets were used in signet rings to stamp wax seals that secured important documents and they were also used by travelers to protect against accidents far from home.

Looking Forward, Looking Backward

January was named for the Roman god Janus. Known as the protector of gates and doorways, he symbolized beginnings and endings. Janus is depicted with two faces, one looking into the past, the other into the future. It seems a fitting symbol for this first month of the year; our door into the new year.

Whew - That's close!

On January 4, 2025, Earth reaches perihelion, which is the point in the planet's orbit where it is closest to the Sun. At perihelion, Earth will be 91,405,993 miles from our bright star. Don't forget your sunscreen!

Polar Opposites

While here in the Northern Hemisphere we consider January to be one of the coldest months of winter, it is generally one of the hottest months in the Southern Hemisphere (rivaling July in the North)!
