On time, on budget.

We say it every month, but our building projects are making excellent progress given the weather. The Emerson and Mt. Caesar work crews will be busy throughout the holiday break. We'll also begin to share conceptual drawings of Mt. Caesar, such as the library (above) and cafeteria (inside).

We look forward to more success in the coming months. Best wishes to all for 2025!

Mt. Caesar

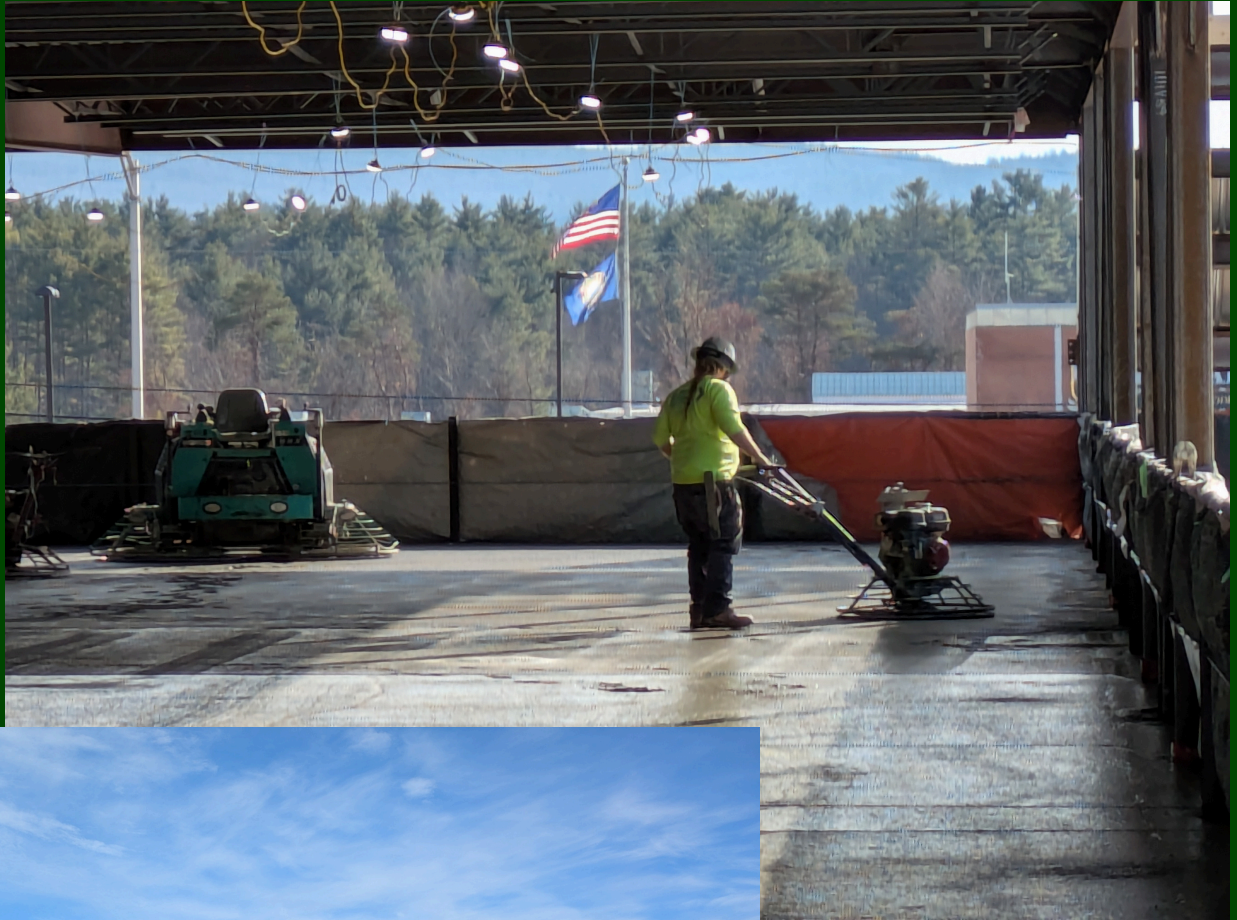

At Mt. Caesar:

- Crews reached the goal of making Building A mostly airtight. This allows significant interior work to begin during the holiday break.
- Installation of roof insulation and membrane are well underway. Concrete preparation and pouring is ongoing.
- The remaining lower roofs should be complete in early January.

Emerson

At Emerson:

- Crews are working toward completing several projects before students return on Jan. 6. Three existing classrooms will be demolished during the break.
- We are working on a temporary HVAC solution for the classroom next to the demolition area, the music room, and the gym, until a permanent system can be installed.
- We are seeking permits for a new well.
- Framing of the administration wing will begin after the new year.
