LEARN LEAD LIVE

Friends From All Over The World

As a Linsly boarding student, you will make friends from all over the world. Our students come from 21 different countries and 6 different states making our residence life a global community reflecting cultures from all over the world. Residential students live in one of four dormitories, supervised by faculty who live among students on campus with their families in a beautiful neighborhood. Because each dormitory is connected to at least two faculty residences, students learn very quickly that their dorm room is literally an extension of our homes. From family-style dinners shared with dorm parents, to structured evening study halls supervised by faculty, to evening get-togethers at faculty homes for pizza and movies, boarding life at Linsly balances the structure and discipline necessary for academic success with the nurturing support necessary for personal fulfillment.

At boarding school you'll learn more than you ever imagined, thanks to small classes that provide one-on-one attention from teachers and a environment where you're surrounded by motivated peers 24/7.

Meet KHOI

Khoi began attending Linsly this year as a 10th grade student from Ho Chi Minh, Vietnam. He chose to apply to The Linsly School because of the "friendly environment and beautiful campus." Khoi feels that new students should get involved with activities once they arrive at school. "Participating in sports and clubs will help you adapt to a new environment very quickly." Khoi is looking forward to participating in several sports/activities and is hoping to create his own new club this year.

Meet OSCAR

Oscar joins the Linsly School from Stockholm, Sweden. He was looking for an educational experience that focused on academics, but also had a home-like atmosphere. Oscar says that at Linsly, "Everyone that you live with becomes like family." When he's not studying, Oscar enjoys playing soccer and working out in Linsly's state of the art work out facilities. "I encourage students who are considering Linsly to speak with current students who can provide useful advice and tips."

Meet ALESSANDRO

Alessandro, or "Rome" as he is known on the soccer field, comes to Linsly from Naples, Italy. His parents helped during the research process to find the right school for him. His favorite part of his experience so far is living in a diverse community. He appreciates the respect that students have for one another on campus and in the classrooms. He encourages prospective students to "be themselves and be respectful to others."

Meet TUANA

Tuana will be joining the Linsly family for the first time from Istanbul, Turkey. She was interested in attending a boarding school where she could meet students from all over the world. Her best advice for new students in a boarding environment is to "Be yourself and understand that the first couple of days can be overwhelming, but with support, you will quickly feel at home." Tuana enjoys swimming, running, playing the piano and spending time in Linsly's art building.

Meet CHASE

Chase, a current 10th grader from Morgantown, West Virginia, chose The Linsly School because of the diversity as well as the curriculum. He was looking for a high school that would ensure he would be prepared for college and beyond. Chase says, "these challenges that we are facing now, will help to prepare us for our future." Chase is looking forward to participating in several athletic activities as well as learning about different cultures and people.

Meet ADDY

Addy began her boarding experience at Linsly as a 9th grade student from Latrobe, Pennsylvania and is now in the 11th grade. As a third generation Linsly student and Residence Assistant in the dormitory, Addy is a great resource for new and younger students at Linsly. Addy says, "The number of people I have met through Linsly is more than I would meet at any other high school. The knowledge that I now have about other cultures and countries will leave a lasting impact."

Meet VIENNA

Vienna arrived this fall at Linsly from Canton, Ohio. She was looking for a school that felt like a community, but also would challenge her academically. She is hopeful that Linsly will offer new and exciting opportunities in the classroom and beyond. Her best advice for new students would be to "use your time wisely." She noted that learning to manage her time was essential for success at Linsly. Vienna is looking forward to joining several clubs and participating in Track and Field while at Linsly.
