Learn about common recommendations made by Occupational Therapists and how they can help achieve the goals set by the family for their child. Recommendations are often tailored to the child's unique needs to enhance their ability to engage in daily activities, promote independence, and improve overall quality of life, but sometimes the "why" gets lost in the recommendation. We hope to empower families to ask the right questions when recommendations are made or ask a question if they think a tool might be helpful for their child.

Jennifer Scoggins-Master's in Occupational Therapy from Washington University in St. Louis with 20 years of pediatric experience. She specializes in working with children with neuromotor impairments and infants with complex medial needs.
Becky Moloney-Occupational Therapy degree from University of Kansas with over 30 years of pediatric experience. As an Occupational Therapist my expertise spans a wide range of areas including, sensory processing, executive functioning, visual processing, fine motor development and more.
