Humans of MCEC

Phoenix Spotlight: Mr. Ghent Huston

This weeks Humans of MCEC is dedicated to Mr. Ghent Huston, our newest teacher here at the Early College. Mr. Huston has lived an interesting life having various careers around the world. He enjoys talking to people about the various technologies he sold during his time in the tech industry. From a young age, Huston loved to speak with others; he is most inspired by his uncle who finished first of his class at Yale. Mr. Huston has long wanted to be a teacher so that he can talk with and share knowledge with others. Despite being here for a short time, Mr. Huston has enjoyed his time talking and learning more about the people and the community we have here at the Early College. As Huston has learned many things about the world, in life he wants everyone to know that doing something you love and care about is very important. He believes that good things will follow if you do something that you are truly passionate about. For now, Mr. Huston can be found teaching Career Management and Business Management. He encourages anyone who may want to go into the business world to have or develop social skills. We hope Mr. Huston continues to enjoy his time here, and continues to do what he loves. #PhoenixPhenoms
