

The Phoenixes' Call

Volume 5| Issue 1| September 23, 2022

Greetings to the new Editor!

About me:

Hello, my name is Rodney Lamonds, and I am a senior here at Montgomery County Early College. Being mostly solo, I will be the new editor and writer for the majority of work you see here in The Phoenixes' Call. While I'm not necessarily a journalist or aspiring to be one, I am a writer at heart, so I will take this challenge head on and try to bring you interesting topics to read about as you walk down these halls.

Writing stories is a passion of mine as I do want to become an author, which makes this newsletter a whole new experience for me. Apologies for not having this out sooner, but now that I have gotten some what of hang of it, be sure to come read sometime, you never know what you might learn.

Did you know?

There is such a thing as a Bumblebee Bat.

This bat also called the Kittis' hog-nosed bat, while debated, it is said to be the worlds smallest mammal, this is according to the Guinness Book of World Records weighing about 0.05 to 0.07 ounces. It is mostly located in the very few limestone caves in the Khwae Noi River in restricted parts of western Thailand and areas of Myanmar .

Cycotte Day 9/14

September 14th is Cycotte Day. On this day, students celebrate their favorite Latin teacher, Mr. Cycotte, by dressing like him. This tradition began last year and continues on.

Humans of MCEC

Phoenix Spotlight: Kohlton Brown

This week's Humans of MCEC is dedicated to Kohlton Brown. Kohlton is a compassionate guy who helps others when they need it, and does his very best each day to demonstrate what it means to be a Phoenix here at MCEC. When asked why he came here to MCEC, he said that he thought this was an interesting place that would give him many opportunities. During his time off, Kohlton likes to read whenever he can or catch up on classic movies and tv shows. He is currently taking classes toward his associates in science degree and plans to attend Fayetteville Technical Community College. Kohlton plans to become a mortician so he can help with the ceremony and burial process for those who pass.
