Study Tips by Peter Eaton

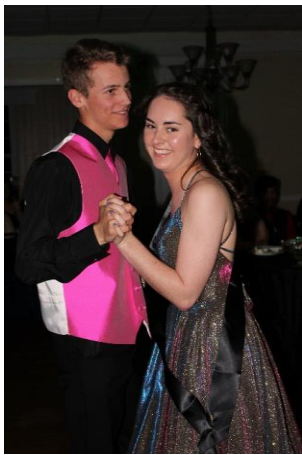

As a student with college classes and strict instructors, it is important to recognize the importance of email. The number one form of communication between teacher and student when not in a classroom is by email. If you experience an issue of any sort or need help, it is in your best interest to email the instructor. Along with this, you must be checking your email EVERY DAY or every other day at the very least. I make it a point to check my email every day, before first period begins. It does not take more than five minutes and is worth the small sacrifice of time. Mrs. Beane strongly advocates checking your email twice daily. Getting into habitually checking your email can be crucial in preventing misunderstandings. Also, there are some instructors who will not tell you when assignments are due and expect you to check their class platform (Blackboard or CANVAS) to find due dates and descriptions of assignments. Be checking!

Equally important is email etiquette. Do not, under any circumstances, send an angry email to an instructor or teacher; they may very well do the opposite of what you want them to do. It is always a good manners to be polite and courteous when sending emails to instructors (or anyone for that matter). Be sure to use words and phrases like "as soon as you get the chance," "please," or "could you help me with...?" or even "thank you for your time." Always understand that they don't have as much obligation to please you as you might think. If you're courteous and patient, you are likely to get the assistance for which you are looking.

The Great Gatsby Prom 2019!

This past Saturday, March 30th, MCEC held their first prom at Denson's Creek Country Club. The theme of the prom was The Great Gatsby, which was conveyed through black and gold decorations. Our first prom king and queen were voted on by all in attendance. Prom King was awarded to Ben Hancock and Prom Queen to Madison Callicutt! Thanks to all who helped plan, came out to decorate, attended, and stayed to clean-up! It was a great time for all!

Diversity Celebration By: Kaylee Foster

The Diversity Celebration was a huge success Thursday, March 28th at MCC. This year’s celebration included many booths about a variety of cultures across the globe such as Mexico, Yemen, Laos, Greece, China, Australia, Espana, and even southern American culture.

This year the Early College participated in the Diversity Fair with many booths and a variety of food, clothing, and even stories of family ties to their booth. Students in Sophomore AVID and Spanish II (SPA 112) participated in this event. Shanti Singthong told her family history of emigrating from Laos to America. She gave significant details about the culture and made sure people knew all about Laos.

When asked why the Early College wanted to participate this year, La’Navy Wilson, who helped run the Winning booth The Deep South, responded, “We wanted to show people about southern culture since people usually overlook it as a culture, and nobody else has done it.”

April Daywalt gave a statement about what she thought of our students participating this year: “I think they did a wonderful job! They had very good presentations and we are very proud.”

MCC staff thought “It was absolutely fantastic! There was a lot more variety with the Early College here. I enjoyed it very much.”

Congratulations to La’Navy Wilson, Kariah Butler, Ajaya Price, Aja Goode, and Austin Hill for winning the 2019 Diversity Traveling Trophy for the Best Cultural Display for their table titled Down South!

Congratulations!

Several Phoenixes have been accepted into spring and summer leadership and learning opportunities across the state. Koby Sedberry has been accepted to Governor’s School for English. LJ Perry was recently accepted to Wake Forest’s Summer Immersion Program and NCSU Satellite. Kaylee Foster was also accepted to NCSU Satellite. Jackie Vargas-Hernandez recently attended Duke Splash. We look forward to each of these students sharing their experiences. If you are accepted into a spring or summer program, please let us know!
