Wellness Introduction

What is a wellness center:

- Short breaks (15 min once a day), to destress and relax in a calming environment
- Learn healthy coping skills

What a wellness center is not:

- A place for class avoidance
- Students may not come in and socialize with friends
- A place to feel excluded or do homework or assignments in an alternative setting
- A place to eat or drink and/or any other disruptive behaviors

Wellnest Policies

- Teachers, administration or counselors are able to refer students to the wellness center
- The center is student driven- students should be the ones asking to go, but they must get approval from their teachers first
- Students should be using good judgment when asking to visit, and should try to avoid missing important instruction, presentations or assessments
- Students are responsible for anything missed in class while they are in the center
- There will be a distinct and unique physical pass to allow students to and from the wellness center
- There will be a maximum capacity (8) for the center to admit students.
- There are steps to follow when determining if a student should be going to the wellness center
    - Students cannot come from the same period more than once a week
    - Students will not be allowed to visit the center during the first and last 15 minutes of class.
- Students will have exactly 15 minutes at the center to relax and de-stress (tier 1)
- If a student requests to visit more than twice a week, they will be referred to a counselor (tier 2).
- If a student requests to visit more than once a day, they will be referred to a counselor (tier 2).
- If students want to see a counselor for a longer period of time, they should not come to the center but to their building.

Wellnest Process

Entering

- Sign in with COSA on Microsoft List
- Turn in Phone
- Be handed self timer set for 15 minutes
- Choose one option: Speak to Counselor; Coping Activity; Rest\Break

Exiting
