Welcome

to Trinity Athletics

Thank you for supporting Trinity Athletics. We have a proud tradition of athletic excellence at Trinity Classical Academy and teams strive for integrity, camaraderie and victory.

When considering classical Christian Education, one might think of the study of the great classical works of literature, conversations in Latin, or perhaps the beauty of math and art. What role does athletics have in classical Christian Education? Is it just passing to an open receiver? Running across the finish line? Bump, set, spike? At Trinity we believe that athletics is a worthy reflection of the classical pursuits of Grammar, Logic and Rhetoric.

Learning the basics of any sport is the Grammar. What are the rules? What are the positions? What are the skills needed? It takes years to hone athletic skills. Repetitive drills, practice over and over again, training and fine motor development until execution becomes habitual. How can an athlete run faster? Weight training, speed drills, choosing the right equipment and the right regimens. All of these combine to grow the athlete into an effective participant, much like the Grammar phase of learning.

Athletics requires thinking, an excellent way to reflect the logic phase of learning. In some sports it is memorizing, understanding and applying plays. In others, it's following the course. In others, it is knowing which swing or pitch or scheme to use for each situation. There is order and integration of the facts and skills that one has learned. How does the way an athlete plays affect the other teammates on the field? There is testing of methodologies and much trial and error where logical conclusions are reached about what works for a team and what doesn't. This is where we see athletes putting into practice the skills they have learned and starting to experiment with their skills and what they can accomplish with what they have learned.

Finally, sports requires communication and strategy, just like the rhetoric phase of a classical Christian Education. An athlete seeks to not only implement their skills in a sporting contest, but to help their teammates improve and work together. There is strategy involved in studying the opposing team, learning their strengths and weaknesses and how to challenge them during the contest. It is a look with the eyes to a teammate to have them make a particular move without the need for words. It is also learning concepts as opposed to specific plays, thus taking competition to a new level.

The skills are the foundation, the implementation is the second step, and learning strategy and concepts is the final step. This process mirrors well the methodology of classical training.

Holding athletics together is the foundation and bond fostered by Christ on a team. Teammates care for one another beyond the field, court or track. They develop deep bonds as the Lord weaves them together in the crucible of competition. They care for one another through the ups and downs, the struggles and the triumphs that come with athletic competition.

Thank you for being with us for today's contest and may the Lord bless this time and all that is learned from it.

GO Knights!

WINTER TRACK

DISTANCE RACING PROGRAM

For those looking for an introduction to distance running, or those already involved in track who want to prepare for the spring season in the best way possible, Wildfires Elite Endurance Club has a winter track program. This program is focused on training for and competing in six meets spanning the months of December (avoiding the holidays) through the first weekend of February. This program combines athletes from multiple clubs, home school co-ops, middle schools and high schools, in a spirit of camaraderie. Any athlete in grades 7-12 is welcome.

ALL-COMERS MEETS

- Smaller format than AAU meets, which means they go by much quicker.
- All age groups can compete in the same race.
- Mixed sexes in many 3000m heats means females can be paced by males in some instances.
- Great competition and fully automated timing means it is possible to lay down qualifying times for USATF MS Indoor Nationals and the CA Winter Championships.

HEAD COACH

Jarod Ebenhack was the 2016 Sun Sentinel Coach of the Year for girls track and field. He coached the female Footlocker West Champion in 2019. He has been on the coaching staff of numerous League and Sectional Championship teams in both track and cross country, and was an assistant coach for Desert Christian for their 2016 CIF State Championship in boys cross country.
