<NEW> A couple of weeks ago it was shared that Emotional Intelligence (EI) is the ability to understand, use, and manage our emotions. You can improve your EI by practicing self-awareness, empathy, and active listening.

Self-awareness means being able to identify your emotions and how you respond to others, reflecting and considering your behavior, language, and attitude and practicing self-compassion.

Empathy means trying to see things from other people's perspectives and being more open-minded and receptive to new ideas and different ways of thinking.

Active listening is being a good listener and communicator by attentively focusing on what the other person is saying, rather than just waiting for your turn to speak.

You can also try journaling, taking a personality assessment, and observing your interactions with others to improve Emotional Intelligence. Remember that EI is a skill that can be developed over time. With practice, you can become more aware of your emotions and how to respond to them in different situations.
