

Moon Drop Grapes

Moon Drops look like an elongated tube with a dimpled end. They have a number of qualities that make them a fantastic choice for anyone who loves snacking on fruit, such as being seedless and having a sweeter and stronger grape flavor than most black grapes.

This new strain of grapes was also developed to last longer in transport and storage than other commercially popular varieties. That means that once they're in your fridge, they should last for quite a while.

Fun Facts

- They cannot be grown at home. They are under patent protection until 2031
- Moon Drops have a firmer texture than regular grapes
- They are a product of cross breeding and are NOT genetically modified.
