

Scenario 1

A principal of a school needs help with their computer, so they choose to ask the youngest teacher in the school.

Scenario 3

A group of people are asked to run like a girl. They flap their hands and frolic. Then, a group of young girls are asked to run like a girl. They pump their arms fast and sprint in place.

Scenario 2

I'm choosing a partner for a science project. I pick Mia because she's always dressed neatly and gets good grades in math.

Scenario 4

I'm a new student and I'm told to sit next to Taylor in the classroom. There is one seat open next to a boy and one seat open next to a girl. I automatically sit next to the girl.

Scenario 5

My teacher asked the class if we prefer having a test or doing a project for our next assessment. I prefer a test because I have been studying the material at home. But when most of the class raises their hand for project, I raise my hand for project, too.

Scenario 6

Jordan believes that people from the soccer team are always unfriendly and stuck-up. One day in the cafeteria, a soccer player smiles and says hello, but Jordan barely notices it. Later, when another soccer player walks by without speaking, Jordan thinks, "See? Soccer players never care about anyone but themselves."

Scenario 7

A teacher needs something moved in the classroom and says, “I need a few strong boys to move this box!”
