CLARIFICATIONS

Question 1:
We plan to submit proposals in response to the subject RFP. In the instructions, we are asked to review the sample agreement and provide comments/exceptions to the contract language. Five elements were identified as part of a complete proposal: 1. Proposal Narrative, 2. Daily Program Schedule, 3. Budget, 4. Proposer Funding Information, 5. References.
If we were to submit comments and possible language changes:

- shall we include it as an additional section, 6. Comments on Sample Agreement?
- It is our understanding that only the Project Narrative has a specified page limit (15, double space), and the rest of the attachments are not counted towards the page limit. Is this correct?

Clarification 1:
Yes, if you wish to submit comments and possible language changes to the District's standard agreement, you may include them in a separate section titled Section 6: Comments on Sample Agreement. As stated in the RFP guidelines, any objections to provisions must include the clause(s) that are unacceptable, the reasons for the objection, and proposed alternative language. The contract will be reviewed and discussed by both parties during the negotiation process to ensure appropriate protection for both sides.

Yes, the proposal guidelines specify a 15-page limit for the Project Narrative portion, excluding the budget, daily program schedule, and other relevant attachments. There is no specific page limit for those additional materials. Refer to page 10, section 8.
