COURAGE

Review Courage as a family! Remember that Courage is choosing what is helpful, right, and kind – even when it's hard or scary. What's something you've been afraid to discuss with your student? Something that might be difficult to explain about our community or the world. Chances are they will hear about it eventually and it may come from someone who is less informed or less supportive than you. Have a courageous conversation with your student. Remind them that love and support are two tools we can use to practice Courage. Discuss as a family ways they can practice Courage around the issue you discuss.
