

Jeremiah Newell, Ed.L.D.

Dr. Jeremiah Newell is the Chief Executive Officer of the Mobile Area Education Foundation (MAEF), a 30-year-old local education non-profit leading educational transformation in South Alabama, and is also Founder of MAEF Public Charter Schools, Alabama's first charter management organization, which includes two public, tuition-free schools. Accel Day and Evening Academy, Alabama's first public charter school, serves grades 9-12, and ACCEL Preparatory Academy serves grades 6-8.

In his previous experience, Dr. Newell taught at the middle and high school levels, launched and led innovative secondary school models within school districts, directed secondary school turnaround efforts in Mobile, Alabama, and served as Harvard Fellow and Chief of Staff for the Rhode Island Department of Education in Providence, Rhode Island.

Dr. Newell is a member of Mobile Bay's 2010 Class of 40 Under 40, a 2012 Graduate of Leadership Mobile, a member of Class XXXIII of Leadership Alabama, and an Aspen-Pahara Fellow.

Dr. Newell received his Bachelor of Science in Secondary Education/Language Arts from the University of South Alabama in Mobile, Alabama, earned a Master of Science in School Leadership from the University of South Alabama, received additional graduate level training in Instructional Design and Development from the University of South Alabama, and earned a Doctor of Education Leadership from the Harvard Graduate School of Education in Cambridge, Massachusetts.