The Fifth Annual Wild Blueberry Weekend is a statewide celebration in Maine that showcases the state's native and iconic fruit—the wild blueberry—and the people who grow, harvest, and care for this beloved crop. Held on the first full weekend of August, during harvest season (August 2–3 in 2025), the event invites residents and visitors alike to celebrate and learn more by exploring wild blueberry farms, tasting locally made blueberry foods and beverages, and learning about this deeply rooted agricultural tradition.

Here's what makes Wild Blueberry Weekend such a cherished annual tradition:

- Local Farms & Tours: Wild blueberry farms across Maine open their doors to the public for free, offering farm tours, hands-on demonstrations, scenic vistas, and opportunities to rake wild blueberries, meet the farmers, and purchase fresh berries and products like jams, pies, and syrups.
- Food & Drink: Restaurants, breweries, wineries, and bakeries around the state create special blueberry-themed dishes, drinks, and desserts — everything from blueberry beer to wild blueberry pie.
- Events & Experiences: Some locations host live music, art, kids' activities, and educational talks about the wild blueberry's rich history, impressive health benefits, and sustainable farming practices.

Wild Blueberry Weekend celebrates generations of Maine's agricultural heritage, educates visitors about the wild blueberry industry, and offers a fun and delicious way to support Maine's hard-working farmers and businesses, experience Maine culture, and eat a lot of delicious blueberry treats.

One great weekend to eat, drink, and experience all things Maine wild blueberry.
