Arts Integration sparks creative connections across district

Arts Integration in Scotch Plains-Fanwood Public Schools isn't just a teaching method – it's a powerful way to unlock student creativity, confidence, and critical thinking across all grade levels.

One recent highlight came from Brunner Elementary School where the district's Arts Integration Specialist/Coach Barbara Prestridge collaborated with third grade teacher Charlene Hall on a creative project inspired by The Miraculous Journey of Edward Tulane by Kate DiCamillo. After reading the story and exploring the china rabbit's journey of emotional growth, students reimagined the ending of the book. They worked together to write and illustrate their new version. They proudly shared the finished product at last week's Board of Education meeting and sent a letter to the author, who wrote them back and praised their work.

The Arts Integration program merges the arts with students' core curriculum to simultaneously build deeper understandings of both the core subjects and the art forms. The program's philosophy is based on the belief that to prepare students for the future, teachers must create a learning culture of innovation and meaning making through creative problem solving.

This year, the program has led initiatives such as:

- Inspiring all second-grade students to blend poetry, visual art and music by writing and illustrating their own poems and sharing the finished works with their families and school communities.

- Leading second grade students at Brunner through science and storytelling lessons about goats, with real-world connections to a Vermont farmer.
- Guiding high school environmental science students to artistically show where they stand on issues surrounding public trust lands.
- Holding five live opera performances for third grade students across the district.
- Connecting Latin drummer Hector Morales with McGinn Elementary students through a Young Audiences grant.

The program also continues to provide professional development opportunities for teachers and staff through painting classes and trips to opera performances. Prestridge said these opportunities are truly building a culture of creativity and arts appreciation in the district.

“Arts Integration is fun for students and staff,” she added. “If it’s rooted in truth and value, then it’s fun – and incredibly powerful.”

Organizational Administrative changes for the 2025-2026 School Year

Please see a recap of a message from Dr. Joan Mast that highlighted organizational and staffing changes in the district. These changes will allow the district to continue meeting the evolving needs of SPF students and addressing budgetary constraints.

- The District Social Studies supervisory position will be eliminated effective June 30, 2025. To ensure continuity and excellence in our Social Studies curriculum, we will implement a collaborative leadership that will leverage teacher leadership in close collaboration with building administrators and coordination across buildings.
- The Technology/Communications Specialist position will be eliminated this fall. These services will be outsourced and overseen by the Superintendent’s Office.
- Ralph Gerace will move from Terrill Middle School to SPFHS as Assistant Principal.
- Brooke Esposito will move from SPFHS to Terrill Middle School as Assistant Principal.
- Ryan Miller, Assistant Principal for Athletics, will also assume supervision of the Health and PE Department.

Our primary focus is to preserve our quality of instruction and to make reductions as far away from the classroom as possible. We appreciate your understanding and continued partnership. Thank you!

The show, titled “Mike Marino Back 2 School,” is a homecoming celebration for both – filled with laughter, nostalgia, and a shared appreciation for the foundation of SPFHS. Members of the public are encouraged to purchase tickets for the event, scheduled for Saturday, May 10 at 8 p.m. in the SPFHS Auditorium. “This is personal now,” Catullo said. “I’ve filmed shows all over the world, but never did I think I’d be shooting a TV special at my hometown high school. The last time I was on that stage was for Battle of the Bands in high school. It’s surreal – and incredibly special – to come home.”

Both Marino and Catullo were deeply involved in SPFHS’s music and theater programs as students. Their paths crossed for the first time during last year’s Hall of Fame induction; Marino commented at the ceremony that he and Catullo should work together on a comedy special.

That fateful meeting sparked the idea and relationship behind the filming of “Back 2 School”.

“This isn’t just a comedy special,” Marino said. “It’s a full circle moment. I want to give back to the place that shaped me.”

Catullo’s team from California will be working all week to transform the stage into a 1981 classroom and the auditorium into a real comedy club experience. The atmosphere will match Marino’s antics as he’ll take the audience through his teenage misadventures, Italian-American family, and enough laughs to make you wish you’d paid attention in class. Central to the fun will be the SPFHS marching band and other surprise guests.

“We want Scotch Plains to win an Emmy,” Catullo said. “Our careers started on that high school stage. Now, it’s time to shine a spotlight on the town and school that helped launch us.”
