Trick or Treat Safety

Kids look forward to Halloween for many reasons. They like dressing up in costumes, but the mostly, they like it for the candy and treats! Who wouldn't? Give your kids some precious Halloween memories that they'll have for life.

Here's some tips to help your children be safe on Halloween night:

- Children should always go out trick or treating accompanied by a responsible adult.
- Be careful when crossing the street. Make sure to look in both directions and make sure that there are no cars coming.
- Instruct your children not to eat any treats until they bring them home to be examined by you.
- Instruct your children to never go into the home of a stranger or get into their car.
- Make sure your child carries a flashlight, glow stick or has reflective tape on their costume to make them more visible to cars.
- For older children—let them know that they should stay together as a group if going out to Trick or Treat without an adult.
- Plan a safe route so parents know where their older children will be at all times. Set a time for their return home.

Ms. Jennifer

My name is Jennifer Kingsbury and I currently work in room 12 at the Child Development Center. I have worked in the Family Services department for seven years, four of which were in the school age program and three in the infant-toddler room here at the CDC. I have worked at many different sites as well as three of the summer art camps. When I was 19, I moved to California from a small town in Kansas.

My goal was to find opportunities to pursue my passion for music and art and to share that passion with others. Soon I met my now husband, Bill, and we began writing and performing music together. Our band, Keenwild, has played shows throughout the country and our local area. We are currently recording our third album. When I met Bill he was a single father of a beautiful 15 month old little girl, Apryl.

We had an instant connection and I have been her mother ever since. I feel truly blessed to work in the Family Services department. I look forward to sharing my love of music and art with the next generation for many more years to come.
