Help Shape Your Baby's Healthy Brain

The brain is the part of the body that feels joy or despair, reacts in a loving or angry way, or uses reason instead of simply reacting. These abilities don't just appear. They are the result of heredity and the experiences the baby has during childhood.

Babies' brains are greatly influenced by:

- Their relationships with parents and other important caregivers.
- Their sense of sight, sound, smell, touch and taste.
- The feelings they experience, and
- The challenges they meet.

Use babies' "Quiet Alert" time to help them grow and learn. Keep your baby near you. Babies thrive on loving attention. Smile when you talk!

Parents who provide responsive, loving care automatically stimulate their baby's brain development.

First of all, always respond to your crying infant. Pick the baby up and try to figure out what's wrong. By trusting you, your baby learns to trust the world.

Touch is just as important. Holding and stroking an infant stimulates growth. How you express your love positively affects your baby's brain.

My Daddy

By: Charleigh Graham

My Daddy is a mountain
 My Daddy is a sea
 My Daddy smiles again and again
 I love my Daddy
 And I know he loves me
 'Cause my Daddy is a ray of light
 That warms a winters' eve
 My Daddy is very special to me
 I could not live without my Daddy
 As he could not live without me.

Ms. Lovelyn

My name is Lovelyn Asprer Reisinger. I was born and raised in the Philippines. I graduated from Luzon University with a Bachelors Degree in Elementary Education. I taught 5th and 6th grades there for four years. I taught four to five years olds at Kids' World Preschool in Temecula. In 2012, I earned a Child Development Site Supervisor Permit. This is my first year of teaching three years old at the Child Development Center in Room 12. I am challenged by the children and the program. I found fulfillment from the way we track the development of our students. I love what I see growing in our children and I am grateful for the support of our staff and our parent-partners. When I am not at work, my husband and I are outdoor people. We love to go camping, kayaking, hiking and mountain biking. We have two rescue pets, Dusty - an Australian Shepherd and Mimi - our male 16 lbs. cat, who runs our household.
