The Importance of Washing Your Hands

You can greatly reduce your risk of illness by simply washing your hands. It is the single most effective way to prevent transmitting many disease. Most people do not wash their hands as often or as well as they should.

Hands should be washed:

- After going to the bathroom. Bowel matter carries a variety of serious infectious diseases.
- After changing a baby's diaper. Not washing hands gives the care giver and other children a greater risks of diarrhea and other diseases.
- Before, during, and after handling food.
- Before eating.
- When hands are dirty.
- After wiping running noses.
- After handling pets or cleaning up after them.
- After sneezing or coughing.
- When someone in your home is sick.
- After handling money, a major carrier of disease germs.

One study proved that children who washed their hands 4 times a day missed 51% less school as other children (due to an upset

Valentine Poem For Parents

By: Joanna Fuchs

Mom and Dad, along life's path,
Your love has shone the way.
For the guidance you have given me,
I'm thankful everyday.

You've always been great parents;
I'm so glad you both are mine;
Deep in my heart, you'll always be
My favorite Valentine.

Ms. Jenna Gruzen

My name is Jenna. I have a beautiful daughter, Ryley, who is 3 1/2. I had the amazing opportunity to stay home with my daughter for almost four years, and during that time I learned so much about child development and how important the first five years are to a child. I enrolled my daughter in the M.V.U.S.D. Child Development Center and was instantly drawn to the wonderful staff and lovely children and decided this is where I wanted to be. I have been subbing in room # 11 for almost five months. Everyday is fun and exciting because I get to see the children grow develop and learn.

I love being a part of their life!
