Your Infant's Brain Development

Much of your baby's brain develops after birth. It also develops more rapidly before age one than at any other time in life. Therefore, you have many chances every day to help your baby's brain develop in healthy ways.

- The outside world shapes the brain
- Babies learn to experience the outside world through their senses
- The experiences you provide greatly affect the way your young child will learn think, and behave for the rest of his or her life.

The brain is the part of the body that feels joy or despair, reacts in a loving or angry way, or uses reason instead of simply reacting. These abilities don't just appear. They are the result of heredity and the experiences the baby has during childhood.

Babies' brains are greatly influenced by:

- Their relationships with parents and other important caregivers
- Their sense of sight, sound, smell, touch, and taste
- The feelings they experience, and
- The challenges they meet

Use babies' "quiet alert" time to help them grow and learn. Keep your baby near you. Babies thrive on loving attention. Smile when you talk.

Rachel Miller

Hello! My name is Rachel and I have been working at the Child Development Center for one year. I currently work in Room 8 with the two and three year olds.

I have a Bachelors Degree in Psychology from UC Irvine and plan to attend Azusa Pacific University for my teaching credential. I also am on the coaching staff at Vista Murrieta High School where I coach hurdles. On my off time, I enjoy spending time with friends and being outdoors.

Working at the CDC is a lot of fun and I hope to see you around!
