"The Voice" Scores a Perfect 10

Eager new employee on first day on the job, 10 yrs. ago

In the fast-paced, deadline-driven world of the PPS Communications Department, Supervisor George Garbeck has become known to most people in the Paterson Public Schools simply as "The Voice." It's his sonorous voice that is heard by Paterson students and staff on early-morning robocalls after a snowstorm. "I've been telling people to stay home on snow days for 10 years," said Garbeck, who marked 10 years working in the district on Oct. 28th. But in addition to his voice, Garbeck also has a distinctive eye. His photography garnered the "Best In Show" award in the 45th Annual New Jersey Senior Citizen Art Show. Garbeck has also captured many magical moments in Paterson schools, some of which have been published in local newspapers. In the calendars he has published, Garbeck has opened many people's eyes to the beauty that lies with the great City of Paterson. Congratulations George!

A Day in the Life of the Hudson River

Paterson's Academy for the Gifted and Talented sixth grade students partnered with the Meadowlands Environmental Center to collect scientific data using hands-on field techniques to capture a snapshot of the Hudson River's ecology. Armed with seine nets, minnow pots, and water testing gear, they collected data, studied the river's species of fish and invertebrates, tracked its tides and currents, and examined water quality and chemistry.

The data collected by the students is now being processed by the Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory of Columbia University. Students found that participating in real world science was more fun than they could have ever imagined.

Senator’s Aides Speak With Students

Eastside High School’s School of Government and Public Administration celebrated Hispanic Heritage Month with a program for students that included two aides from U.S. Sen. Robert Menendez’ office: Darcy Gallego, who works for the outreach team, and Chris Flores, who works for the press department. Gallego and Flores spoke about the many jobs in the government sector, and their experiences working in the senator’s office and in Washington, D.C. They also spoke of their college experiences. They urged students to become affiliated with political candidates, or to run for office if they feel the current state or federal policies are unfair or ineffective. The program was dedicated to Edgardo Miranda-Rodriguez, the first Latino to write Latino storylines and create Latino characters for Marvel Entertainment, as well as starting his own graphic arts company, Somos Arte.

STEAMing into NRC's Enrichment Program

At New Roberto Clemente Middle School (NRC), a morning enrichment class is giving sixth-graders who love STEAM (science, technology, engineering, art, and mathematics) opportunities to create projects integrating these content areas. During the first week, the students created origami cranes of different sizes. The project led to discussions about the principles of geometry and engineering, as well as the ancient art of Japanese paper folding.

During enrichment, students create STEAM projects. This is an origami folding project.
