BMS Athletic Code of Conduct

As a student athlete, you are a representative of the school to other players, other coaches, other school communities, and the public as a whole. You are also a leader in the school, a role model to other students and seen as dependable and trustworthy by the faculty and staff. As such, you are expected to conduct yourself as a person who is principled, caring, and a thinker. Below are the general guidelines you are expected to follow.

Principled:

You are on time to class
You are passing all subjects, and demonstrating effort in all classes.
You are acting appropriately at all times: classroom, hallway, café, gym, and recess.
You are cooperating with any adult that makes a request of you in the building.
You are on time to practices, games, and other events as requested.
You have all needed equipment for practices and games.

Caring:

You are respectful to peers, teachers, visitors, and staff members in the building.
You are putting the needs of others first.
You are advocating for and defending those who need it.
You are responsible with equipment and supplies.

A Thinker:

You make decisions based on what is right, not what is popular.
You consider others feelings, emotions, and safety before saying anything or posting something on an online platform.
You are preparing, physically and mentally, for practices, games, and other events.

Consequences:

Any student not making satisfactory progress in any class will not practice and instead will be placed in a study hall for the time of practice until satisfactory progress is made.

Athletes receiving multiple redirects will have a conference with their coach, and are subject to team-level consequences (sitting part of a game, practice suspension, suspension from the team, etc)

Athletes receiving ISS one time will miss a quarter of the next game.
Athletes receiving ISS a second time will miss a half of a game.
Athletes receiving ISS a third time will miss a whole game
Athletes receiving ISS more than three times, OSS, or a referral for serious infractions, will meet with coaches, AD, and a parent to discuss the athletes place on the team.
