Charleston, SC - Charleston County School District (CCSD) invited local businesses, organizations, and community members to its Community Partnership Pop-up Event on Monday, June 30, 2025, at the Cooper River Center for Advanced Studies.

This interactive event was designed to foster meaningful partnerships between CCSD and the broader community. The Partnership Pop-up offered attendees the opportunity to learn how they can collaborate with CCSD to support students and families across the district. From offering services and mentorships to volunteering and beyond, the event aimed to connect passionate community stakeholders with impactful engagement opportunities.

"We believe that when schools and communities work together, students thrive," said Lauren Crawford, project manager for the Department of School Support. "This event was a platform for dialogue, collaboration, and innovation - bringing together people and organizations who want to make a difference in public education."

Highlights included partnership opportunities with CCSD, connections with district leaders and school representatives, exploration of how businesses or organizations can support student success, and pathways to mentorship, volunteering, and service-based collaboration.
