[Sandra] I'm Sandra Hayes, an associate professor at the Mollie Webb Speech and Hearing Center. We are a graduate program. Our students	Woman wearing dark sweater (Sandra) standing in classroom in front of skeleton and models of skulls Text: Sandra Hayes, S.L.P.D., C.C.C.S.L.P. Speech Language Pathology Program Director are coming through to earn their master's degree in communication disorders. Within the academic program, I teach several courses. We also provide clinical services to the community for children through adults.	Sandra on camera
We provide services for articulation, language, voice, fluency, cognition, swallowing, and pragmatic disorders.	Student testing teen's cognition with flip charts
We also have two classroom programs for children with language delays. Ages two through three and then three through five.	Sandra on camera
We provide hearing evaluation and hearing aid dispensing for children through adults.	Young woman having hearing tested
And I have been so grateful to be a part of this program, both clinically and academically.	Sandra on camera
[David] Hi. My name is Doctor David Irwin. I'm a certified speech language pathologist	Older man (David) in blue shirt and patterned tie standing in Mollie Webb lobby Text: David Irwin, P.H.D., C.C.C.S.L.P. Professor of Communication Disorders and also fellow of the American Speech Language and Hearing Association. I'm a full time professor here in Communication Disorders at L.S.U. Health Shreveport. I have the opportunity to work with master's students as they	David in lobby treat and help patients who come to the Mollie Webb Speech and Hearing Center.	Student playing a game with a young girl

One person I've helped this semester is a gentleman who has aphasia and had some difficulty recalling words when he speaks. Another person I've worked with is a young boy who is working on expressive language and answering different types of questions. I really enjoy working here. I teach both first year and second year students in the master's degree program, and always want to be able to be available for the students and the clients.	David in lobby
[Beth] I'm Beth Wooden, and I'm a clinical instructor here in the Speech Language Pathology program at L.S.U. Health Shreveport.	Woman in white blouse (Beth) in office in front of framed diplomas and certificates Text: Beth Wooden, M.A., C.C.C.S.L.P. Speech-Language Pathologist
My primary role at Mollie Webb Speech and Hearing Clinic is to supervise graduate students	Beth in office who are providing speech and language therapy to a wide variety of clients. My particular areas that I'm interested in are pediatric language disorders, early intervention,	Student testing cognition with flip chart and marking scores on a form autism, and multidisciplinary assessment. One of the things that I think is really special about working at Mollie Webb is that I have the opportunity to improve the lives of my clients, as well as participate in educating the next generation of speech language pathologists.	Beth in office

I'm also an instructor in our graduate program at L.S.U. Health Shreveport. I teach several classes for the students in the Master of Communication Disorders program. I see clients for all of all ages from, young toddlers through age 90 and above. Many of the clients I see have disorders such as aphasia, which is a language disorder that happens after a stroke. I also see people with problems such as voice or swallowing, problems that occur due to strokes or conditions such as Parkinson's or ALS. And I enjoy the opportunity here at L.S.U. Health to learn, new information, acquire new skills. We're really encouraged to do that,	Heather in lobby to keep current in the field and, do whatever we need to do and learn whatever we need to learn to keep, treating the patients well.	Hearing specialist prepping patient for hearing test
So it's a great opportunity. I really enjoy being here and learning from our patients.	Heather on camera
[Julie] My name is Julie Smith, and I'm a nationally certified speech language pathologist. I'm an assistant professor	Woman with red hair wearing a green blouse (Julie) standing in a children's activity area Text: Julie Smith, M.A., C.C.C.S.L.P. Speech Language Pathologist Mollie E. Webb Clinic Director here at L.S.U. Health Shreveport. I'm in the Communication Disorders program, where I teach diagnostics, clinical methods, and ethics. I'm also the clinic director here at our clinic known as the Mollie Web Speech and Hearing Center. At Mollie Web,	Julie in playroom
we can evaluate and treat both children and adults	Student evaluating young girl's cognition and verbal skills that have various communication, swallowing, or hearing concerns.	Hearing specialist testing ear of patient

I think the unique thing about Mollie Webb is that we are a graduate program, so each of our faculty members, teaches the students in the classroom, but also provide hands on instruction and supervision in the clinical setting - bringing about the next generation of speech language pathologists.
