Comments:

District leadership (superintendents and directors) and tosas' mindsets about teachers and students need to change. There was no statements of commitment on the shifts they will make to support teachers and students in today's speeches.

math study session and PD

Comments:
