East Helena Public Schools will be using the Literacy Standards taken from the 2014 Montana Early Learning Standards (MELS) for English Language Arts and Literacy within the Early Learning Classrooms known as the LittleLantes. The Literacy Standards are on the pages following the explanation of MELS. The Standards in their entirety can be found at <https://opi.mt.gov/Portals/182/Page%20Files/Early%20Childhood/Docs/14EarlyLearningStandards.pdf>

2014 Montana Early Learning Standards

The standards that guide the work of early childhood professionals to ensure that children from birth to age five have the skills and knowledge they need to achieve success in learning and reach their full potential in life

Alterations of Note

Montana's Early Learning Guidelines for Children 3 to 5 (2004) and Montana's Early Learning Guidelines for Infants and Toddlers (2009) were incorporated into one document that represents a continuum of growth and development for children from birth to age 5. This integrated document is called the 2014 Montana Early Learning Standards (MELS). Major changes include:

- Instead of using the term “guidelines,” the current document uses the term “standards.” This wording aligns with similar documents used across the state to guide the education of Montana's children, most notably K—12 Standards.
- Changes were made to ensure that the MELS incorporate current research, particularly in the areas of brain development and cultural/linguistic diversity, including significant and meaningful integration of the Montana Indian Education for All Act. In addition, a crosswalk analysis of the MELS was conducted to highlight connections with other professional standards, including the Montana Common Core Kindergarten Standards for Language Arts and Math and the Next Generation Science Standards as well as the Head Start Framework.
- The MELS feature a continuum of developmental progression without listing specific ages. Children's development can be identified and observed over time on the continuum described in each developmental domain.

Applicable Settings

The Montana Early Learning Standards (MELS) are applicable to children regardless of the setting in which they are cared for, nurtured, and educated. These settings may include their own homes; family, friend and neighbor homes; family and group child care homes; child care centers; preschool programs; Head Start; Early Head Start; and public schools.

Literacy

Early or emergent literacy develops as children become aware of the relationship between the written and spoken word. Young children develop skills in using symbols, language, and images to become interested and competent in learning to read, write, and represent information.

Standard 3.5 – Early Reading and Book Appreciation

Children develop an understanding, skills, and interest in the symbols, sounds, and rhythms of written language as they also develop interest in reading, enjoyment from books, and awareness that the printed word can be used for various purposes.

Standard 3.6 – Print Development / Writing

Children demonstrate interest and skills in using symbols as a meaningful form of communication.

Standard 3.7 – Print Concepts

Children develop an understanding that print carries a message through symbols and words and that there is a connection between sounds and letters (the alphabetic principle).

Standard 3.8 – Phonological Awareness

Children develop an awareness of the sounds of letters and the combinations of letters that make up words and use this awareness to manipulate syllables and sounds of speech.

“To learn to read is to light a fire; every syllable that is spelled out is a spark.”

— Victor Hugo

Early Reading and Book Appreciation

Standard 3.5: Children develop an understanding, skills, and interest in the symbols, sounds, and rhythms of written language as they also develop interest in reading, enjoyment from books, and awareness that the printed word can be used for various purposes.

Benchmarks: What we want the child to be able to do	Indicators: Behaviors we might see	Learning Opportunities: Possible experiences to support development	Infancy
a. Focus intently on a book	The child may look at a book with no attempt to touch it.	Read to and talk with each child daily. Point out and talk about the illustrations when you show them to the child as you read and turn the pages.	Developmental Continuum
b. React when being read a book	The child may smile or coo when being shown the pictures in a book.	Choose books with fewer words and engaging illustrations for younger children. Use the child's cues to guide how you "read" the book to the child.
c. Explore books with mouth and hands	The child may grasp and bring the book to her mouth to suck and chew on it. The child may shake, bend, or wave a book, or pat the pictures.	Provide easy access to a variety of cloth and board books throughout the environment and integrate looking at them with the child into the routine.
d. Maintain attention when being read a book	The child may gaze at the page or point to illustrations while someone is reading a book to her.	Provide quality children's literature that includes the range of authors, illustrators, and genres.
e. Vocalize when being read a book	The child may make vocalizations while pointing to pictures and may eventually ask, "What's that?" or use "book babble" imitating the sound of reading.	Encourage verbal exchange by responding to vocalizations, such as "Yes, the cow says moo."
f. Choose familiar books and repeat words or vocalizations in books	The child may seek out familiar books and repeat vocalizations and words heard when she was previously read the book.	Use facial expressions, gestures, and varied voice tones and tempos as you read to children. Encourage their active participation as they learn sounds, words, phrases, and rhymes in familiar stories.
g. Point at or name objects, animals, or people in pictures, books or drawings	The child may point to pictures and label or describe them either independently or when prompted.	Point to and describe what is going on in pictures in books.
h. Indicate that the pictures on a page are related to the text	The child may pretend to read books she has memorized, using the pictures as cues, or use pictures to predict and "read" the storyline.	Have a conversation with the child as you read books, promoting her to say something about the book and then responding to her comments. This process is called dialogic reading and has been shown to enhance language skills.
i. Purposefully explore books with respect to proper position and use	The child may open and close the book carefully, study the pictures, make sounds, and position the book correctly for reading.	Guide the child in how to handle a book gently, turn it right side up, and turn the pages as small motor skills develop.
j. Demonstrate interest in books and reading	The child may bring a favorite book to be read, carry books around, or listen attentively when a book is being read.	Ensure that there is a variety of quality children's books located in child-accessible locations throughout the environment.
k. Repeat simple songs, rhymes, or stories	The child may sing familiar songs, recite simple poems, or relate relevant aspects of a story.	Ask children to choose books or songs for program activities, and plan to read favorite books, sing selected songs, share finger plays, and retell rhymes repeatedly as requested.
l. Use books, magazines, and other printed materials to enhance play	The child may pretend to read the newspaper or a cookbook while playing house in the dramatic play area.	Provide relevant reading materials throughout the play areas. Use books to enhance children's play themes, such as offering books about farms and farm animals when you observe the child playing with farm animals in the block area.
m. Recognize print or symbols in the neighborhood, community, and environment	The child may read familiar signs, such as a favorite restaurant or food label.	Point out, read, and create booklets or murals filled with print and signs naturally occurring within the program and community environment. Encourage children to add to these collections and read them to one another.
n. Demonstrate an understanding that print progresses from left to right	The child may follow the text on a printed page by moving her finger from left to right while reading or following along as someone else reads.	Follow the text with a finger as you read aloud.
o. Identify the title of a book	The child may point to the title of the book or spontaneously say the title when the book is presented.	Point out the title, author, and/or illustrator on the cover of the book with each reading.
p. Demonstrate an understanding that letters make up words, words make up sentences, and sentences make up stories	The child may point to or label letters in words, or identify similarities and differences among words, such as "My name starts with a 'T' like Tara's."	Model reading and writing for various purposes both in group and individual activities, such as writing a group "thank you" note after the field trip or recording the story the child tells about his drawing.
q. Sustain attention to increasingly longer books and stories	The child may attend to longer stories or books, especially when there is animation and dramatic presentation or when the child is actively involved, such as imitating a phrase, word, or sound that is repeated in the story.	Introduce longer stories and books as children indicate the ability to attend and remain engaged, such as reading a chapter every day before nap/rest time.	Preschool

Print Development/Writing

Standard 3.6: Children develop interest and skills in using symbols as a meaningful form of communication.

Benchmarks: What we want the child to be able to do	Indicators: Behaviors we might see	Learning Opportunities: Possible experiences to support development	Infancy
a. Experiment with grasp	The child may grip a rattle or other toy and later a variety of drawing and writing tools using her fist and fingers.	Provide safe and interesting objects for the child to hold, mouth, and visually explore.	Developmental Continuum
b. Watch others write and draw	The child may watch with interest as an adult or another child draws, paints, or writes.	Model writing and drawing with purpose, and connect meaning to the words and drawings, such as talking with the child about what you are writing down on the shopping list.
c. Scribble on paper spontaneously	The child may use a crayon, marker, or pencil to make marks and scribble on a piece of paper or other writing surface and eventually describe what the marks are meant to be.	Provide access to variety of writing tools and supplies across the environment, with opportunities for independent use.
d. Demonstrate a pincer grasp	The child may pick up crayons, pencils, and even smaller objects using her thumb and forefinger.	Offer healthy and safe finger foods, play-dough, pegs and peg boards, and puzzles with knobs that promote small motor skills.
e. Experiment with a variety of writing tools	The child may use pencils, crayons, chalk, markers, pens, paints, sand, or write in the air with her finger.	Encourage and model use of a variety of tools for writing and drawing. Ensure that these opportunities are accessible and abundant throughout the environment.
f. Imitate others who are writing or drawing shapes	The child may imitate what she has seen others write using traditional and non-traditional tools, such as making marks in the sand with a stick or drawing with a finger in pudding.	Provide imaginative experiences and creative materials for children to write with, such as using chalk on a chalkboard wall to record messages to and from the teacher.
g. Demonstrate controlled linear scribbles	The child may include identifiable shapes in his scribbles.	Provide daily experiences for children to write using a variety of writing tools and an assortment of paper kinds, sizes, and shapes.
h. Write letters, letter-like shapes, and inventive words	The child may write individual letters and strings of letters or letter-like shapes in groups.	Provide vertical wall spaces covered with large sheets of paper for children to draw/write and individual journals for each child to record important activities. Encourage children to read out loud what they have written.
i. Use print in play	The child may write down the food order at an imaginary restaurant.	Provide writing supplies for children to use in dramatic play and encourage them to generate lists, write checks, create menus, or make signs related to their play theme.
j. Demonstrate an understanding that print holds meaning and that thoughts and ideas can be written down	The child may ask an adult to label a drawing or write down a story that he narrates.	Ask the child if he would like you to write a description or story about his drawing or painting. Use his words and read it back to him. Be ready to take dictation whenever the child is eager to tell a story.
k. Form letters to approximate conventional forms	The child may form alphabet letters, and indicate that letters stand for spoken sounds, although not always correctly.	Provide natural opportunities for children to copy both two-dimensional and three-dimensional alphabet letters available in the play environment.	Preschool
l. Write his or her own name	The child may write, copy, and correctly label the letters in her name with increasing accuracy.	Encourage children to put their name on their work, sign in when they arrive, and find their labeled places at circle time.
m. Write familiar words using accepted writing format	The child may copy familiar or create pretend words, correctly writing left to right and top to bottom of the page.	Encourage children to write for a variety of functional purposes, such as making a label for the block construction or writing a note to a friend.

Print Concepts

Standard 3.7: Children develop an understanding that print carries a message through symbols and words, and that there is a connection between sounds and letters (the alphabetic principle).

Benchmarks: What we want the child to be able to do	Indicators: Behaviors we might see	Learning Opportunities: Possible experiences to support development	Infancy
a. Show interest when stories are read	The child may watch the reader with wide open eyes and a thoughtful expression, gaze at the page, or point to a picture on the page.	Read to each child early in life and often each day. Provide a full array of books in locations accessible to children and throughout the environment.	Developmental Continuum
b. Imitate sounds when looking at words in a book	The child may duplicate simple sounds, words, or phrases when being read or looking at familiar books.	Read to children frequently during the day, and repeat favorite books again and again.
c. Point to words in the book	The child may point to words when being read a book, although not necessarily the word being read.	Occasionally follow the text with a finger when reading aloud to the child.
d. Demonstrate an understanding that print represents words	The child may pretend to read a book or ask an adult to write her words on her art work or a note to her grandma.	Encourage each child to dictate a description of artwork or other projects. Recite aloud as you write names, lists, and notes.
e. Respond to print in the environment	The child may notice and comment on the print she sees around her, such as the name on the box of cereal she eats. The child may further ask, "What does that say?"	Provide a "print rich" environment by labeling toys, supplies, and equipment. Read aloud signs/labels as you come across them throughout the day.
f. Demonstrate an awareness that letters of the alphabet can be individually named	The child may identify letters seen in the environment or ask an adult how to write each letter in his name or in a word he is writing.	Set up a writing area in the environment where children can practice writing and copying alphabet letters from an alphabet poster or children's printed name cards that are always available. Include a variety of writing tools, such as pens, pencils, typewriters, or tablets, and an assortment of paper, stationary, notepads, and envelopes.
g. Identify letters	The child may identify a growing number of letters, such as the letters in his name or sing the "Alphabet Song" pointing to the letter as it is sung.	Provide opportunities for children to see their names in print, such as attendance boards, cubbies, circle rugs, and birthday charts. Talk to each child about the letters in his or her name as it is being written.
h. Match letters and their sound	The child may match letters with their sounds, such as explaining that his name, Sam, starts with the letter "S" that makes the sound "sssss."	Present a two or three-dimensional visual of one letter and corresponding objects that begin with the same letter, emphasizing the letter's sound, such as ball and bell begin with the "buh" sound. Have the child select from a collection of objects those that begin with the same "B" sound, such as a button, a bead, a banana, a balloon, or a boat.	Preschool

Phonological Awareness

Standard 3.8: Children develop an awareness of the sounds of letters and the combination of letters that make up words and use this awareness to manipulate syllables and sounds of speech.

Benchmarks: What we want the child to be able to do	Indicators: Behaviors we might see	Learning Opportunities: Possible experiences to support development	Developmental Continuum
a. Respond to the sound of spoken language	The child may focus on the person speaking and kick her feet or move her arms in response to the rhythms of spoken language.	Talk to the child throughout the day about routines, what you are doing, what she is doing, and what is going on around her.
b. Imitate sounds in stories, songs, and rhymes	The child may imitate a sound she has heard and say it over and over, such as “ba, ba” or “ga, ga.”	Pay attention to the sounds that each child makes and repeat them back as in a conversation.
c. Engage in familiar word games, songs, or finger plays	The child may sign or imitate the motions for simple games, such as “Pat-a-Cake” or “Peek-a-Boo.”	Play these simple games with each child one-on-one, gently helping him to mimic the actions, if needed.
d. Imitate rhyming patterns	The child may imitate rhyming patterns in songs, rhymes, and finger plays modeled by another.	Engage in songs and rhyme play. Read rhyme-rich books, such as those by Dr. Seuss.
e. Discriminate and identify sounds in spoken language	The child may play with words and attempt to create rhyming words, such as “top” and “pop.”	Encourage the child’s creativity in using words and playing with words.
f. Demonstrate an increased awareness of beginning and ending sounds of words	The child may identify words that begin with the same sound, such as Mary and Mona, or end with the same sound, such as Phil and Bill.	Make up silly rhymes to match with children’s names, such as singing “Willaby, Wallaby, Woo.”
g. Demonstrate progress in rhyming words	The child may progress through developmental stages in rhyming beginning with identifying if two words or pictures rhyme, to filling in words to known songs, rhymes, and finger plays, to finally producing words that rhyme and making up her own rhymes.	Sing rhyming songs such as Raffi’s “Down By the Bay,” recite poems and rhymes, and read predictable books. Encourage creative generation of rhyming words even if they become “nonsense” words.
h. Hear and separate words into syllables	The child may clap out the sounds (syllables) in words guided by an adult, such as clapping three times for the child’s name “Sa-man-tha.”	Model by clapping out the syllables in each child’s name. Create a graph illustrating the number of syllables in all of the children’s names.

Introduction

This guide outlines all the Montana Standards for English Language Arts and Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science, and Technical Subjects. Providing an overview of the scope of all the standards from kindergarten through twelfth grade, this guide includes:

- Reading Standards for Literature
- Reading Standards for Informational Text
- Reading Standards Foundational Skills
- Reading Standards for Literacy in History/Social Studies and Science and Technical Subjects
- Writing Standards
- Writing Standards for Literacy in History/Social Studies and Science and Technical Subjects
- Speaking and Listening Standards
- Language Standards

The standards reflect the constitutional mandate that all educators must provide instruction including the distinct and unique heritage and contemporary contributions of American Indians in a culturally responsive manner (See IEFA; MCA 20-1-501 Article X; resources; and materials).

Adopted in November 2011, the standards provide a framework for literacy not only in English Language Arts, but across content areas in history/social studies, science, and technical subjects. Just as students must learn literacy skills and conceptual understandings to be college and career ready, they must be able to read, write, speak, listen, and use language effectively in a variety of content areas. Literacy standards for grade 6 and above are predicated on teachers of ELA, history/social studies, science, and technical subjects using their content area expertise to help students meet the particular challenges of reading, writing, speaking, listening, and language in their respective fields. It is important to note that the 6–12 literacy standards in history/social studies, science, and technical subjects are not meant to replace content standards in those areas but rather to supplement them. They reflexively demonstrate the cogent reasoning and use of evidence that is essential to responsible citizenship in our global society. Students who meet the standards develop the skills in reading, writing, speaking, and listening that are the foundation for any creative and purposeful expression in language.

Organized by sections starting with the anchor standard for each topic area, this guide provides resources and guidance to educators as they align their curriculum to these standards. The standards use individual grade levels in kindergarten through grade 8. This view of expectations across grade levels provides a tool for teachers to personalize the learning for their students by providing the broader context of a learning progression for students. The standards are categorized in two-year bands in grades 9–12 to allow schools and districts flexibility in high school course design. In addition, appendices provide helpful resources to support implementation of these standards.

Montana Anchor Standards for Reading

The K-12 Reading Standards on the following pages define what students should know and be able to do. Anchor standards provide the umbrella overview of expectations. These anchor standards are grouped into four broad concepts: Key Ideas and Details, Craft and Structure, Integration of Knowledge and Ideas, and Range of Reading and Text Complexity. Specific topic areas such as Reading Standards for Literature, Reading Standards for Information Text, Reading Foundational Skills, and Readings Standards for Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science and Technical Subjects provide grade-level specific standards to support teachers in designing their instruction. Together, these standards define the skills and understandings all students should demonstrate to be career, college, and community ready.

Key Ideas and Details

1. Read closely to determine what the text says explicitly and to make logical inferences from it; cite specific textual evidence when writing or speaking to support conclusions drawn from the text. (CCRA.R.1)
2. Determine central ideas or themes of a text and analyze their development; summarize the key supporting details and ideas. (CCRA.R.2)
3. Analyze how and why individuals, events, and ideas develop and interact over the course of a text. (CCRA.R.3)

Craft and Structure

4. Interpret words and phrases as they are used in a text, including determining technical, connotative, and figurative meanings, and analyze how specific word choices shape meaning or tone. (CCRA.R.4)
5. Analyze the structure of texts, including how specific sentences, paragraphs, and larger portions of the text (e.g., a section, chapter, scene, or stanza) relate to each other and the whole. (CCRA.R.5)
6. Assess how point of view or purpose shapes the content and style of a text. (CCRA.R.6)

Integration of Knowledge and Ideas

7. Integrate and evaluate content presented in diverse media and formats, including visually and quantitatively, as well as in words. (CCRA.R.7)
8. Delineate and evaluate the argument and specific claims in a text, including the validity of the reasoning as well as the relevance and sufficiency of the evidence. (CCRA.R.8)
9. Analyze how two or more texts address similar themes or topics in order to build knowledge or to compare the approaches the authors take. (CCRA.R.9)

Range of Reading and Text Complexity

10. Read and comprehend complex literary and informational texts independently and proficiently. (CCRA.R.10)

Montana Anchor Standards for Writing

The K-12 Montana Anchor Standards for Writing define what students should know and be able to do by the end of a grade or grade band. The anchor standards below provide the broad look at what students should be able to do, while the grade level topics provide specificity for instructional planning. These anchor standards are grouped into four broad concepts: Text Types and Purposes, Production and Distribution of Writing, Research to Build and Present Knowledge, and Range of Writing. Specific topic areas such as Writing Standards and the Writing Standards for Literacy in History/Social Studies, Science and Technical Subjects provide grade-level specific standards to support teachers in designing their instruction. Together, these standards define the skills and understandings all students should demonstrate to be career, college, and community ready.

Text Types and Purposes

1. Write arguments to support claims in an analysis of substantive topics or texts, using valid reasoning and relevant and sufficient evidence (CCRA.W.1)
2. Write informative/explanatory texts to examine and convey complex ideas and information clearly and accurately through the effective selection, organization, and analysis of content. (CCRA.W.2)
3. Write narratives to develop real or imagined experiences or events using effective technique, well-chosen details, and well-structured event sequences. (CCRA.W.3)

Production and Distribution of Writing

4. Produce clear and coherent writing in which the development, organization, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience. (CCRA.W.4)
5. Develop and strengthen writing as needed by planning, revising, editing, rewriting, or trying a new approach. (CCRA.W.5)
6. Use technology, including the Internet, to produce and publish writing and to interact and collaborate with others. (CCRA.W.6)

Research to Build and Present Knowledge

7. Conduct short as well as more sustained research projects based on focused questions, demonstrating understanding of the subject under investigation. (CCRA.W.7)

The Speaking and Listening Standards on the following pages define what students should know and be able to do. Anchor standards provide the umbrella overview of expectations. These anchor standards are grouped into two broad concepts; Comprehension and Collaboration, and Presentation of Knowledge and Ideas. Grade-level specific standards provide teachers support in designing their instruction. Together, these standards define the skills and understandings all students should demonstrate to be career, college, and community ready.

Comprehension and Collaboration

1. Prepare for and participate effectively in a range of conversations and collaborations with diverse partners, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly and persuasively. (SL.1)
2. Integrate and evaluate information presented in diverse media and formats, including visually, quantitatively, and orally. (SL.2)
3. Evaluate a speaker's point of view, reasoning, and use of evidence and rhetoric. (SL.3)

Presentation of Knowledge and Ideas

4. Present information, findings, and supporting evidence such that listeners can follow the line of reasoning and the organization, development, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience. (SL.4)
5. Make strategic use of digital media and visual displays of data to express information and enhance understanding of presentations. (SL.5)
6. Adapt speech to a variety of contexts and communicative tasks, demonstrating command of formal English when indicated or appropriate. (SL.6)

Montana Anchor Standards for Language

The Language Standards on the following pages define what students should know and be able to do. Anchor standards provide the umbrella overview of expectations. These anchor standards are grouped into three broad concepts; Conventions of Standard English, Knowledge of Language, and Vocabulary Acquisition and Use. Grade-level specific standards provide teachers support in designing their instruction. Together, these standards define the skills and understandings all students should demonstrate to be career, college, and community ready.

Conventions of Standard English

1. Demonstrate command of the conventions of standard English grammar and usage when writing or speaking. (L.1)
2. Demonstrate command of the conventions of standard English capitalization, punctuation, and spelling when writing. (L.2)

Knowledge of Language

3. Apply knowledge of language to understand how language functions in different contexts, to make effective choices for meaning or style, and to comprehend more fully when reading or listening. (L.3)

Vocabulary Acquisition and Use

4. Determine or clarify the meaning of unknown and multiple-meaning words and phrases by using context clues, analyzing meaningful word parts, and consulting general and specialized reference materials, as appropriate. (L.4)
5. Demonstrate understanding of figurative language, word relationships and nuances in word meanings. (L.5)
6. Acquire and use accurately a range of general academic and domain-specific words and phrases sufficient for reading, writing, speaking, and listening at the college and career readiness level; demonstrate independence in gathering vocabulary knowledge when encountering an unknown term important to comprehension or expression. (L.6)

Note on range and content of student language use

To build a foundation for college and career readiness in language, students must gain control over many conventions of standard English grammar, usage, and mechanics as well as learn other ways to use language to convey meaning effectively. They must also be able to determine or clarify the meaning of grade-appropriate words encountered through listening, reading, and media use; come to appreciate that words have nonliteral meanings, shadings of meaning, and relationships to other words; and expand their vocabulary in the course of studying content. The inclusion of Language standards in their own strand should not be taken as an indication that skills related to conventions, effective language use, and vocabulary are unimportant to reading, writing, speaking, and listening; indeed, they are inseparable from such contexts.
