Human-Centered Design and Transformation Work

If you make decisions that impact other people's experiences, you are a designer already. Design asks you to consider [or reconsider] how the decisions you make impact the experiences of others.

Human-Centered Design leverages the methods and tools of design to help teams engage with stakeholders, explore the needs of a community and create thoughtful, innovative solutions that address transformation goals and aspirations.

The tools and frameworks in this playbooks are designed to amplify and accelerate your work on implementing the four transformations outlined but the NY Inspires project.

“The alternative to good design is always bad design. There is no such thing as no design.”

For Your Consideration

1

What types of guidance should the State Education Department provide to help educators cultivate the attributes of the Portrait in their students?

2

What information do educators, students, parents, members of higher education, the business community, and the public at large need to successfully understand the goals of the Portrait?

3

How do we ensure that new regulations are inclusive of all students across the state?
