SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY PROJECT ADVANCE

Allowing students to experience the rigor of college-level courses and prepare for the next step in their academic journey.

Syracuse University Project Advance (SUPA) is a dual enrollment program that gives Canterbury students the opportunity to take and earn college credit for actual Syracuse University classes. Held for Fifth and Sixth Form (11th and 12th grade) students during the regularly scheduled school year, the classes are taught by Canterbury teachers trained as adjunct Syracuse instructors.

These university courses are identical in all important aspects to courses offered to matriculated Syracuse University students, using the same syllabi (where appropriate), materials, textbooks, assignments, and assessments. Experiencing the rigor of a college course while still in high school can help students prepare for the expectations and challenges of college academics.

SUPA sections at Canterbury School are typically three-credit, one-semester courses and vary from year to year.

Recent offerings have included:

Creative Nonfiction Writing

Earth System Science (Lab)

Economics of Personal Finance

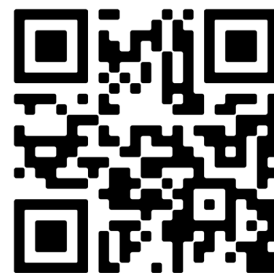

Entrepreneurship and Global Economy

Gender & Literary Texts

Principles & Contemporary Issues in Sport Management/Business Management

"I was extremely impressed by the level of dedication of the students and instructors for the courses. Their final projects—both the paper and presentations—represented a high level of academic work!"

Dr. Gina Pauline, Associate Professor,
Undergraduate Program Director, and Canterbury's site coordinator at Syracuse University
