

RESIDENTIAL LIFE

Central to the preparations for the arrival of girls was the renovation and expansion of the dormitories. In 1973, the Board of Trustees approved a multimillion-dollar fundraising plan for new girls' dorms, locker rooms, and bathrooms. The first two dorms added, Units 4 and 6, were built in the former servants' quarters in the second floor of Hundred House, which had gone largely disused since the Second World War. "Intervis," or intervisitation between boys and girls, only started in 1980 after extensive study into the pros and cons of its potential impact on the school. Life at Groton unfolds largely in the dorms through feeds, check ins, prefecting, or late-night studying. Enjoy these photos from the dorms.
