Documents Needed

What are the current household income documentations needed?

See the list below, and include all items that apply to your situation, make sure the dollar amounts are clearly shown.

- The complete, signed copy of your most recent tax return (all children must be reported on the parent's 1040 Form to be considered eligible. If the child is not on your tax return you are not eligible)
- Current paychecks (must be no more than two months old)
- Self-Employment income (total income, no costs included)
- Unemployment Compensation, Disability, or Worker's Compensation
- TANF or SNAP benefits
- Social Security, Pension, Retirement, VA Benefits, or Strike Benefits
- Child Support or Alimony
- Other Income: contributions from family members that help with rent or other support
- Rental Income

Reminders:

If you are married, you must include spouse's current income.

Provide the most current income to match tax return, if there is a variance in income from tax return submitted, the most current data will be considered. For example, if the current income reflects a new job with higher monthly income than indicated in the tax return, the current income will be used as verification of income.
