

Community: Sharing Christ's Love

Part 1: Students Care for Teacher

As a teacher at Bethany, Eileen Becker-Hoover mentors a group of about ten students in their academic work, social development, and faith and life issues—to listen to, nurture, and care for them. This fall these students returned that care to her.

One day, during the time when students meet with their mentors, the group visited Eileen at her home, where she was recuperating from recent surgery. “It was neat to hear the voices of about 10 people coming across the lawn,” she says. They brought her hugs, flowers, poems to read, and wishes for her to get well and return to the classroom.

Though the students normally meet individually with Eileen, not as a group, they gathered together soon after her surgery to plan their visit. One of these students, Sarah Brew, says, “We wanted to do something nice for her. And we missed our time with her.” Their plans included selecting a bouquet of yellow flowers—her favorite color—and one student wrote an original poem for her (read poem bethanycs.net/role_reversal_100915).

Rachel Roth Sawatzky, who filled in as the students’ mentor while Eileen was on medical leave, says, “One of the great things about Bethany is the student-teacher relationships that develop and the close-knit community that lead students to visit their teacher at home. That kind of care makes Bethany a special place to be.”

Community: Sharing Christ's Love Part 2: Athlete Inspires Coach

Typically, coaches inspire athletes—helping to motivate and encourage them in their sport and in life. However, on Sept. 12 the roles reversed for cross country coach Krysten Parson (KP) and senior Ali Hochstetler.

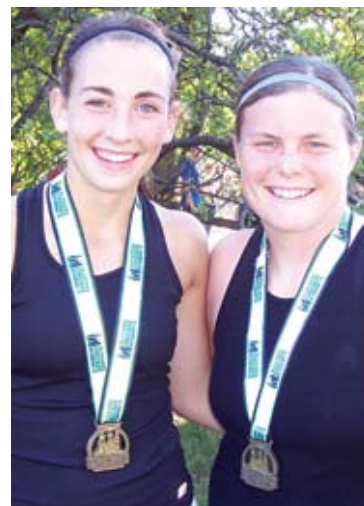

Last winter Ali convinced KP to run a half-marathon with her this fall. Actually, there wasn't much convincing. More than just a coach to her players, KP is a mentor and friend who enjoys being with them and doing things together. So, even though she was not a distance runner, she soon agreed.

After months of training KP felt prepared for the race and optimistic they could reach their goal of finishing together in under two hours. The race started well, but around the 9-mile marker KP began to feel miserable and considered walking or stopping. She suggested that Ali go on ahead.

But Ali refused. Her decision to stay with her coach, rather than pursue their time goal on her own, didn't seem like a big deal to her. After all, she had asked her coach to run this race together. Leaving KP to finish on her own was not an option.

Ali's decision was significant for KP. She says, "At this point I became inspired by my running partner. What Ali did for me is not a typical quality of teenagers: willingly sacrificing her own agenda for me. In all my years as an athlete and now as a coach, I have rarely seen such selfless care. What Ali demonstrated to me is how Jesus lived every day."

From the Principal

This issue highlights community at Bethany. Alumni classes gathered here recently to renew friendships. Greg Sommers reflects on community life at the school, including the impact of host families.

One of Bethany's core values is community, and as a school we do much to cultivate caring, supportive relationships. We see Christ-like caring when a teacher, noticing a student struggling to focus, asks whether things are going well with family and other areas of life. We see caring when a player consoles a teammate after a disappointing play or celebrates a big success. We see it when everyone joins to pray for a teacher's recovery from surgery. And we see community when students and staff worship together in song and prayer.

Jesus once said that the entire law and prophets could be reduced to these twin teachings: "love God wholly and love your neighbor as yourself" (Mt. 22:37-39).

Clearly the heart of Jesus' good news is the call to love others, to help bear one another's burdens. We joyfully celebrate the unmistakable presence of such love and caring in our community.

Jesus also asks us to broaden our understanding of community to include people different than we: in his era, Samaritans, Gentiles, and even enemies (Mt. 5:43-48). At Bethany we welcome students with varying gifts and from diverse religious, socioeconomic, and racial-ethnic backgrounds. This year, for instance, about 24% of our students represent diverse racial-ethnic groups.

We celebrate community we enjoy even as we embrace the opportunity to keep growing towards the generous inclusion to which Jesus calls us.

POSTMASTER: Send form 3579 to Bethany Bulletin, c/o Evangel Press 2000 Evangel Way Nappanee, IN 46550

Benji Hurst

Benji serves as athletic director and teaches middle school phys ed. He graduated from Goshen College in 1994 with a B.A. in elementary education and a science endorsement. In 2005 he completed a master's in technology education at Ball State University.

Following graduation from college, Benji taught sixth grade in Berne, Ind., for two years and then middle school science and technology education at Goshen Middle School since 1997. In addition to teaching he has coached basketball, football, track, and cross country, serving the past two years as track coach at Bethany.

Benji and his wife Leah have two children: Katie (14) and Simon (17). They attend Waterford Mennonite Church. In prior church settings he has served as a Sunday school teacher for youth.

Having had a child as a student at Bethany for two years now, Benji, who chose to attend public school primarily to participate in programs not available at Bethany at the time, notes that had he known then what he knows now, he would have made a different decision. He says, "I have come to value the opportunities Bethany provides for students to grow as a whole person, not just academically, but socially and spiritually as well."

In recent years, Benji has had a growing sense of calling to Bethany, and he's excited about the opportunities his new role affords. He says, "I am truly excited to be joining Bethany Christian Schools. Bethany is well known for developing individual student's gifts, high academic achievement, and a strong sense of community. I believe these values are also a strong foundation for a quality athletic program. I am glad to serve with student athletes, faculty, staff, and parents to see that Bruin athletics continue to grow as a positive and successful program."

Nathan Swartzendruber

Nathan teaches vocal music and handbell choir. A graduate of Iowa Mennonite School (2005) and Goshen College (2009), he served this past year as children's music director at First United Methodist Church in Mishawaka, Ind.

In August he married college classmate Grace Eidmann. They attend Sunnyside Mennonite Church where he is involved in music and song leading.

Nathan is excited to be at Bethany and says, "I remember how significant a Christian education was to me in high school. Now I look forward to being on the other side of the classroom. I am thrilled at how Bethany emphasizes the arts, and find it refreshing how students can just pick up a hymnal and sing. Truly refreshing."

Board Member

Lynn Jackson

The only new board member, Lynn is vice president for enrollment management at Goshen College. Her desire for Bethany is that the school continues to be a place where "students receive a college prep curriculum through a Christian perspective."

She attends Kern Road Mennonite Church, where she serves as coordinator for youth activities and as a member on the hospitality committee.

For a list of all board members, see bethanycs.net/board.

Greg Leatherman Sommers ('80): New Conference Administrator

Greg began in August 2010 as conference administrator for Indiana-Michigan Mennonite Conference, completing the conference's three-person administrative team (along with Dan Miller, conference pastor, and Doug Kaufman ('85), conference pastor for leadership transitions).

After graduating from Bethany, Greg earned a Bible and religion degree from Goshen College and a master's in public administration from the University of South Carolina. He counseled young people in the military while in Mennonite Voluntary Service in Chicago. After that he was executive director of Quaker House in Fayetteville, N.C., and for five years administrator at Warwick River Christian School, Newport News, Va., a member of Mennonite Schools Council. Greg is also a certified sign language interpreter.

Greg married Sue Leatherman in 1994. Their son, Luke, was born in 2003, and they adopted their daughter, Tessa, as a newborn in 2006.

Share about your sense of call to this position? My childhood dream was never, "become an administrator." Frankly, I would worry about a child with such a dream. Much of the work I have done since college has been missional and outside the traditional Mennonite world. My rather odd combination of nonprofit management, communication, counseling, technology, and even expertise in building maintenance seemed to be a good fit here. And my recent work analyzing and realigning tasks resembled some of the work the Missional Leadership Team desired here.

What have you valued about your Christian education experiences as a student? Though I was born in Goshen, my parents, Elson ('58) and Verna ('59 Yoder) Sommers, settled our family in a place in Pennsylvania with no Mennonites, where much of my faith formation happened among Methodists. I returned to Goshen as a boarding student at Bethany, living with different host families and attending different congregations each of my three years there. (What a wonderful gesture of grace, to accept a teenager into your household for a year!) The diversity of faith expressions I encountered helped me better understand and appreciate people with different points of view. At Bethany I further developed my belief system and grew closer to God while getting a great education. What more could one ask for?

Is Christian education relevant for the mission of the church? Mennonite education serves a vital purpose in the care and nurture of families. Compare the amount of time students spend in school to the faith instruction time with parents or in church. Are we serious about raising and equipping well-educated, ardent Christians to enjoy lives of faithful service? If so, then we need to develop and sustain faith development and educational resources like Bethany.

Reunions: A Faith Story

—Eva Lapp ('11), see full article at bethanycs.net/alumni/100924_reflector

High school reunions provide an opportunity to reconnect with former classmates and see how life has shaped each person. Sometimes people you didn't interact with much in teen years are the people you connect with most in adult years. You are given the chance to build relationships as adults rather than having only high school memories. Reunions represent, as guidance counselor Jim Buller ('71) describes, "a faith story."

As high school students, we haven't begun to have our own class reunions. Yet, this alumni weekend can be a reminder for us to enjoy our high school years and the purpose that future reunions will hold. To those already looking past high school, reunions give a chance to imagine what our lives will become as adults. Who will return to Bethany as a faculty or staff member? Who will have the most kids? Who will be the professional athlete? The journeys we take from this point onward will be remembered and shared at reunions as we each begin to write our own "faith story."

Alumni News

Alumni Weekend

The second annual alumni weekend was held Sept. 24-25, 2010.

Approximately 250 alumni, former faculty, spouses, and children attended the weekend, which included class reunions (for classes ending in 0 or 5), tours of the school, an evening banquet, children's activities, and complimentary admission to the Bethany-Westview boys soccer game (Bethany won 2-0).

Photos of the class reunions are available to view/download at bethanycs.net/reunions/2010.

The next alumni weekend will be Sept. 23-24, 2011, with reunions for classes ending in 1 or 6. Information on these class reunions will be posted at bethanycs.net/reunions as it becomes available.

Community: Sharing Christ's Love Part 3: Winning at Love

Bethany's boys tennis team won a school-record 18 matches this season. However, coach Matt Miller was just as excited about what happened to the team off the court. He says, "We see the tennis team as a family, because community can be one of the most important things in life. Athletics can help students understand what community can be and grow in faith as we process sport, faith, and life issues together."

Miller intentionally works at building community, just as he works to help players develop tennis skills. This year the team used 2 Peter 1:5-8 as a focus for growing together and learning to "win at love."

Miller told his team, "I cannot guarantee that you will always play your best, that my coaching advice will always work, or that we will win a given match. But if love is our primary goal, then friendships will be forged and memories made, and retold, with a peace that comes from doing it the right way. This season, we will win. We will win at love."

During the team's camp, Miller asked his players to find a way to share love with others. Some took food to workers at area businesses. Others cleaned up trash at Baintertown Park or carried groceries for people from the store to their car. All valued the time spent doing something together while serving others.

Team captain and senior Ben Mast says, "We grow as a team when we do things together. And it is great to know that our coach cares about making us better people, not only better tennis players."

Varsity fall sports teams combined for a 60-33-4 record. The boys soccer team won the Goshen sectional and a fourth consecutive conference championship. Junior Femi Hollinger-Janzen was the boys soccer area scoring leader and earned all-district honors. Senior Ben Mast earned all-district and academic all-state honors in boys tennis.

Athletes Spike Out Cancer

Bethany and Goshen volleyball teams collaborated for the second year to support breast cancer awareness by wearing pink and white uniforms and donating all gate receipts, concession money, and T-shirt proceeds from the Oct. 5 contest at Bethany to Elkhart County organizations that help fight breast cancer. More than $3,000 was raised. Bethany's cross country team also purchased T-shirts for a home meet and the girls basketball team participated in Middlebury's run for the cure.
