Market Recap

The Fed officially pivoted in September, lowering the fed funds rate by 25 basis points to a new target range of 4.00% to 4.25%. While the move was widely priced-in, Chair Powell called it a “risk management” cut. He emphasized that “inflation risks remain tilted to the upside,” pointing to persistent price pressures in services and energy. At the same time, he acknowledged that “employment risks are increasingly tilted to the downside,” reflecting the overwhelming concern over labor market weakness.

The FOMC action came on the heels of weak data. The August jobs report showed nonfarm payrolls rising by just +22k, well below consensus expectations of +75k. Revisions to prior months subtracted another 21k jobs, bringing the three-month average to a mere +29k. The unemployment rate rose to 4.3%, its highest level since early 2022. The few job gains were concentrated in health care, while private sector hiring remained soft. Wage growth also slowed, with average hourly earnings rising +0.3% MoM.

The August CPI report showed headline inflation rising +0.4% MoM and +2.9% YoY, driven by higher energy and transportation costs. Core CPI rose +0.3% MoM and held steady at +3.1% YoY. Services inflation remained elevated, particularly in medical care and shelter. Goods prices were mixed, with declines in apparel and electronics offset by increases in household items and auto insurance. The persistence of sticky inflation, especially in non-discretionary categories, continues to complicate the Fed’s path to more accommodative monetary policy.

Despite the soft labor data, the broader economic picture was buoyed by a large upward revision to Q2 GDP. The final estimate showed real GDP grew at an annualized rate of +3.8%, up from the prior estimate of +3.3%. The massive upward revision was driven by stronger consumer spending and a narrowing trade deficit, with real final sales to private domestic purchasers revised up to +2.9%. The data underscores the resilience of the U.S. economy, even as pockets of weakness emerge.

Equity markets responded positively to the Fed’s pivot and the Q2 GDP revision. The S&P 500 and Nasdaq posted their best September performance in over 15 years, rising +3.3% and +5.3%, respectively. The rally was fueled by strong earnings, optimism around artificial intelligence, and expectations for further rate cuts. Year-to-date, the S&P 500 is now up nearly +15%, with growth stocks and tech leading the charge.

Treasury yields fluctuated throughout the month. Short-term rates eased modestly following the Fed’s rate cut, while longer-term yields remained elevated amid persistent inflation concerns and fiscal uncertainty. The yield curve steepened slightly, reflecting diverging expectations for near-term policy easing versus long-term inflation risks. The government shutdown, which began on September 29th, adds further confusion, raising concerns about delays in key data releases and fiscal stability.

Political dynamics remain tense. Stephen Miran, Trump’s newly appointed Fed Governor, publicly advocated for a deeper 50bps rate cut. His comments drew sharp criticism from more hawkish members of the FOMC, underscoring the growing divide within the Committee. Powell reiterated the Fed’s commitment to “data dependency,” but acknowledged that the path forward may require “greater flexibility” given the evolving economic landscape.

With persistent inflation, faltering job growth, and political dysfunction escalating, the Fed faces a tough road ahead. September’s rate cut may mark the beginning of a broader easing cycle, with markets currently pricing in a 100% probability of another rate cut at the end of October.

S&P rates the creditworthiness of individual bonds from: AAA highest to D lowest.

Investing in fixed income securities involves interest rate risk, credit risk, and inflation risk. Interest rate risk is the possibility that bond prices will decrease because of an interest rate increase. When interest rates rise, bond prices and the values of fixed income securities fall. When interest rates fall, bond prices and the values of fixed income securities rise. Credit risk is the risk that a company will not be able to pay its debts, including the interest on its bonds. Inflation risk is the possibility that the interest paid on an investment in bonds will be lower than the inflation rate, decreasing purchasing power.

Cash alternatives typically include money market securities and U.S. treasury bills. Investing in such cash alternatives involves inflation risk. In addition, investments in money market securities may involve credit risk and a risk of principal loss. Because money market securities are neither insured nor guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or any other government agency, there is no guarantee the value of your investment will be maintained at $1.00 per share, and your shares, when sold, may be worth more or less than what you originally paid for them. U.S. Treasury bills are subject to market risk if sold prior to maturity. Market risk is the possibility that the value, when sold, might be less than the purchase price.

Investing in stock securities involves volatility risk, market risk, business risk, and industry risk. The prices of most stocks fluctuate. Volatility risk is the chance that the value of a stock will fall. Market risk is the chance that the prices of all stocks will fall due to conditions in the economic environment. Business risk is the chance that a specific company's stock will fall because of issues affecting it. Industry risk is the chance that a set of factors particular to an industry group will adversely affect stock prices within the industry.
