The Bolles School is bringing a new, state-of-the-art athletic performance center to its Upper School San Jose campus, thanks to a landmark $6 million donation from Patrick Zalupski of Dream Finders Homes.

“This extraordinary gift reflects a shared vision for empowering our student-athletes to reach their full potential – physically, mentally and academically,” said Bolles President and Head of School Tyler Hodges. “The Dream Finders Homes Athletic Performance Center will be a cornerstone of our campus, reinforcing Bolles’ reputation as an international leader in athletic and academic excellence.”

The 12,000-square-foot Dream Finders Home Athletic Performance Center will serve Bolles athletes from middle to upper school. It will feature advanced strength and conditioning equipment, a hydrotherapy room, training and recovery room, weight room and indoor turf for practice, a covered 13,000-square-foot, 40-yard outdoor turf practice field and a nutrition zone.

“This gift is a game-changer,” said Bolles Athletic Director Rock Pillsbury. “It allows us to provide our students with the very best tools, knowledge and environment to thrive in the classrooms, on the fields, courts and pools.”

Construction is slated to begin next year. It is estimated to cost $12 million in total.
