JIM PIERSON, DEAN, COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

We in the College of Business are proud to serve our students and community during our centennial celebration of Misericordia University. The 2024-2025 academic year was a year of accomplishment and engagement by our students and faculty. Our business student engagement included trips to the LinkedIn office in the Empire State Building in New York City, the Drexel University School of Law in Philadelphia, the regional American College of Health Executives (ACHE) Conference in Scranton, PA, and the Men's Basketball NCAA finals in San Antonio, Texas, among others.

Our students honed their business skills through business competition events and case studies with the Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) in state competition in Harrisburg, PA, and advancing and placing in national competition in Dallas, TX. We also hosted at Misericordia University the regional TecBridge business competition, and our Business Scholars and Leaders participated in the IACBE virtual business case competition, with both groups of students receiving honors or advancing in competition.

We energized the entrepreneurial spirit on campus this year with our new program in business entrepreneurship and our new faculty hire specializing in entrepreneurship. We also hosted thought leaders on campus, to include: a serial entrepreneur, a federal reserve economist, an NFL president, and an attorney heavily engaged in the negotiating rights to bring the Formula One race to Las Vegas and advance economic development.

Read more about these events and student activities in our annual newsletter, and please consider contributing to the College of Business Dean's Fund to further help our student engagement and academic success. We are proud of the past, but laser-focused on meeting the challenges and seizing the opportunities ahead. Onward MU Business!

Mark J. and Lorraine S. Alles
DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER SERIES

INSPIRING STUDENTS IN

LEADERSHIP | ENTREPRENEURSHIP
COMMUNICATIONS | INNOVATION

Our Fall 2024 Mark J. and Lorraine S. Alles Distinguished Speaker Series featured Serial Entrepreneur Kris Jones, known for his successes starting more than a half-dozen companies, such as Pepperjam (a top digital marketing company), and LSEO (a top NEPA digital marketing agency). Kris shared his entrepreneurial journey, growing up in Northeastern, PA (NEPA), raised by a single Mom, and sharing his struggles, successes and important lessons learned along the way. His journey started with beginning Pepperjam in his dorm room at Villanova, and he noted to the audience of over 125 students and faculty of how gratifying it is to him that his companies have had a positive economic and social impact in NEPA.

Key Lessons Kris shared as an entrepreneur included 1) Raising capital is tough, but possible. Persistence is key to getting “yes.” 2) Pivoting is a skill, not a sign of failure; 3) Leverage relationships and give back. Trust collaboration. 4) Adaptability is non-negotiable. Examples from COVID impacts to business highlighted this lesson.

Kris, who has previously served as a Misericordia University Board of Trustees member, and returned as a Trustee in June 2025, also talked about the importance of giving back. He shared with the students the importance of mentoring and his service on non-profit boards.

Kris summed up the journey by noting that it is about being curious, honest and willing to share along the way. “Success is not what you do; success is what you help others achieve and share.”

Sport Management Symposium

In February 2025, the College of Business at Misericordia University hosted its highly anticipated Sport Management Symposium. The Symposium was an impactful event that brought together students and industry professionals at the forefront of collegiate and professional athletics. Designed to provide a dive into the evolving landscape of sport management, the Symposium served as a platform for career development.

Students started the day with a networking session that connected them directly with professionals across diverse sectors of the sports industry. Representatives from organizations, including ASM Global, Saint Peter's University, Kaempfer Crowell, Learfield, Troutman Pepper Locke, and the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Penguins, offered insights into their respective fields, sparking engaging conversations about career paths, emerging roles, and the future of sports business.

The day's programming featured two panel discussions that explored timely issues reshaping the world of sport. The collegiate athletics panel took on the headline topic of Name, Image, and Likeness (NIL), with a distinguished group of experts discussing the implications of recent NCAA policy shifts and the broader legal landscape. Moderated by Dr. Jeff Levine of Drexel University, the panel included Christopher Brolley (Troutman Pepper Locke), Mike Trudnak (Learfield), and NFL agent and attorney Joseph Frio (Process Sport Management). Panelists explained how NIL legislation is transforming the student-athlete experience, the importance of proper legal representation, and the emerging structures of revenue sharing. Frio emphasized the critical role of advocacy in this new era, stating, "It's not just about how much money they're making—it's about making sure their interests are protected, as every student has a different amount of leverage."

The professional sports panel highlighted revenue innovation and marketing trends across major leagues, featuring Alyssa Levandoski (Barclays Center), Chris Sipsky (Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Penguins), Mario Oliveri (New York Yankees), and moderator David Gargone, Chair and Associate Professor of Business at Misericordia. In a particularly compelling segment, Levandoski discussed the sustainability initiatives taking place at Barclays Center: "We want to be the best sustainable, eco-friendly green building we can be. It builds a great reputation and saves the organization money long term. One conversation our team is currently having is working on a process that converts our oil into energy." The panel provided attendees with real-world implications and insights, making a lasting impression on all.

A key feature of the Symposium was the Mark & Lorraine Alles Distinguished Speaker Series, headlined by Stephanie Gronauer, a prominent Las Vegas attorney and partner at Kaempfer Crowell. Stephanie's distinguished career includes playing a pivotal role in events such as the Formula 1 Las Vegas Grand Prix and the Super Bowl. Gronauer shared a powerful presentation on her insights working closely and at the intersection of sport entertainment, urban development and business law in facilitating the explosive growth in the Las Vegas sport scene. Her presentation was further elevated by a special guest appearance and interview with Sandra Douglass Morgan, President of the Las Vegas Raiders. Morgan's conversation with Gronauer offered students rare insight into the leadership demands of managing an NFL franchise, as well as her legal background and personal journey to becoming a female leader in professional sports.

A particularly meaningful aspect of the day was the return of several Misericordia University alumni who are now making their mark in the field. Notable alumni participants included Cameron Harty, Robert Gronauer, Danielle Clifford, Chris Sipsky, Mario Oliveri, Alyssa Levandoski, and Mike Trudnak. Their presence highlights the strength of the College of Business alumni network and the enduring impact of a Misericordia education.

Misericordia Published Article

Business Law Professor

Josh Winneker and former student and pre-law advisee

Brooke Chronister, BA

'23, published an extensive article in the University of New Hampshire Sports

Law Review (3 U.N.H. Sports L. Rev. 225 (2024), on "Revisiting Workers' Compensation Protection in the National Football League Collective Bargaining Agreement." The article provides an overview of workers' compensation and its gaps in coverage in relation to NFL professional athletes, and offers a creative solution that allows states to maintain their autonomy while building off an existing clause in the collective bargaining agreement to shift responsibility to the teams and the NFL to take care of injured players. Brooke is now a rising 2L at Georgetown University School of Law. This article arises out of Professor Winneker's research interest, which focuses on the intersection of three specific disciplines: business law, sport law, and employment law.

STUDENT CLUBS

Sport Management Association

MU STUDENTS VOLUNTEER AT THE PEACH BOWL

This year, college football made history, and the Misericordia University Sport Management Association (SMA) was honored to be a part of it. To bring in the new year, students traveled to Atlanta, Georgia to volunteer at the Chick-fil-A Peach Bowl at Mercedes-Benz Stadium. During the game, students sold 50/50 raffle tickets to raise funds and awareness for the Peach Bowl LegACy Fund, a charitable organization based in Atlanta that helps fight childhood cancer. The SMA also had the opportunity to visit the College Football Hall of Fame, allowing students to learn more about the legacy and traditions of the sport.

In addition to their volunteer efforts, SMA members participated in a professional development experience in Rock Hill, South Carolina. At Winthrop University, the SMA met with Charles Archuleta, Ticket & Event Operations Manager for the Winthrop Eagles, for a Q&A session. They also toured the Winthrop Coliseum and other athletic facilities and attended the men's basketball game between Winthrop and USC Upstate.

Sport Management Association

SAN ANTONIO TRIP

Members of the Sport Management Association traveled to San Antonio, Texas, for a professional development experience, getting involved in the ancillary events surrounding the NCAA Men's Final Four.

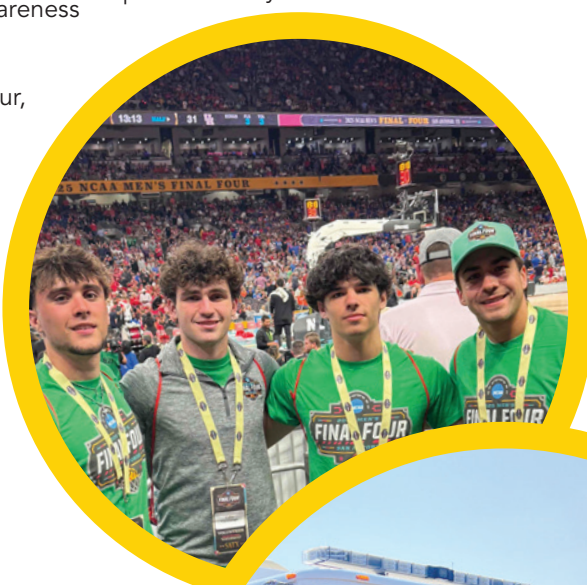

Students worked with the San Antonio Local Organizing Committee to support several events tied to the tournament. Their responsibilities included guest services and event logistics at the Tip-Off Tailgate, a large fan engagement zone near the Alamodome. They also served on the NCAA Green Team during the championship game, helping to implement sustainability initiatives and promoting environmental awareness among fans.

In addition to their work during the Final Four, SMA students visited the University of the Incarnate Word, where they toured athletic facilities and engaged in a Q&A session with the university's Athletic Director and other senior athletic administrators. This conversation provided insight into the structure and operations of collegiate athletics, as well as career paths within the field.

Students also had the opportunity to attend a San Antonio Spurs NBA game and a San Antonio FC match, offering them a look at professional sports from both a fan and operations perspective.

The trip gave students a chance to apply classroom knowledge in a real-world setting, connect with professionals in the field, and contribute meaningfully to a major sporting event. It also highlighted the level of commitment and professionalism that MU students bring to the sports industry

Healthcare Administration

FIRE EXTINGUISHER TRAINING

Drexel provided an individual tour for the students, gave a law student-led admissions presentation and then hosted a question and answer session. Afterwards, we were joined for lunch by alumna Dani Clifford, who is currently practicing law at Troutman Pepper in Philadelphia.

Misericordia University Students Attend Healthcare Symposium at the University of Scranton

Misericordia University is proud to announce that 10 members of the Misericordia University Student Chapter of the American College of Healthcare Executives (ACHE) recently attended the 28th Annual Healthcare Symposium held at the University of Scranton. MU Business Scholars & Leaders trip to LinkedIn

Our inaugural Business Scholars and Leaders cohort teamed up with Dean Jim Pierson to take a road trip to New York City this fall to visit LinkedIn, the preeminent social networking site for professionals, whose regional office is located in the Empire State Building. The entire business cohort made the trip, consisting of Collin Deckert, who spearheaded the logistics on the trip, and Ethan Poor, Matthew Coates, Noah Astheimer, Jason Giambone, and Connor Bevan. Our LinkedIn advisors for the trip were Christie Castellanos, Account Director, Healthcare, and Dillon Deckert (Collin's cousin!), Account Manager, Sales Solutions. They both did a great job of presenting the capabilities and features of the LinkedIn website and the various products they offer, as well as a tour through the facility, and a superb lunch in their expansive dining room. One of the highlights of the trip was an express line tour to the top of the Empire State Building, where the future business leaders received a great look at the expansive views of New York City on a beautiful fall day. It was a first-class trip into the Big Apple, and LinkedIn gave us an excellent demonstration of their services and social marketing capabilities.

CAMPUS EVENTS

Preview Day

The College of Business hosted a Preview Day for 60 Wilkes-Barre Business Academy and other prospective students on November 14th, 2025, in the McGowan Room in Bevevino Library. Breakout sessions sessions regarding our business academic areas of accounting, business economics, certified financial planning, entrepreneurship, health care administration, management, marketing and sport management. A student panel hosted by our Business Scholars and Leaders members Connor Bevan, Ethan Poor and Riley Piontkowski was also held and solicited good discussion on life at the College of Business from a student perspective. We look forward to seeing the prospective business students on campus as members of the COB community in the near future!

Anton Badev: A Perspective on Peer Effects in Social Networks

Dr. Anton Badev, a senior economist at the Federal Reserve Board, presented "A Perspective on Peer Effects in Social Networks," to a large crowd of business students in the McGowan Room, on November 11, 2024. His relevant research on social networks and how they influence our beliefs, decisions and behaviors provided a window into understanding how social networks are studied by economists and market researchers to predict consumer behavior. Dr. Badev highlighted how some of his research related to how high school students respond to increasing tobacco prices. His talk highlighted that friends are a choice, not a chance. In response to change, one could follow the response of their friends, or alternatively, they could choose differently and change their friends. Dr. Badev challenged students to consider how public policy may be shaped by the presence of peer effects and the social multiplier implications it creates.
