

FINANCIAL AID OFFER COMPARISON WORKSHEET

Different schools have different resources, so financial aid offers can vary greatly from school to school. There are several components of a financial aid offer you should consider:

- Direct costs are billed to you by the school (e.g., tuition and fees) and are not always finalized figures at the time you receive your financial aid offer. Other direct costs may include institutional food services (e.g., meal plans) and institutional housing (e.g., dorms or campus housing).
- Indirect costs are estimated expenses over which you may have some control (e.g., books and supplies, transportation between campus, residences, and place of work). Other indirect costs may include food and non-institutional housing (e.g., rent for off-campus housing).
- Scholarships and grants, referred to as gift aid. Be sure you understand how additional outside scholarships you receive may impact the financial aid offered by the school.
- Loans and work-study, also referred to as self-help aid, which you can accept, accept in part, or decline. Always remember: Loans must be repaid! Never borrow more than you need.
- Out-of-pocket costs remaining after subtracting offered aid from the total cost of attendance that you or your parents may have to find other resources to cover, such as parent loans, or additional part-time employment.
- Student consumer information and disclosures (such as graduation and transfer-out rates) that the school must provide, either with the financial aid offer, by reference, or by link to other materials—be sure to review them carefully.

Financial aid offers usually only cover one academic year at a time, and amounts offered may change from year to year. Check the school’s website or publications or contact the school’s financial aid office for more information on the terms and conditions of gift aid (such as renewability in future years) and self-help aid.
